Hull Implies Moscow Pact Ends Need For Alliances

Secretary Sees No More Use for Spheres of Influence Or Balance of Power

Applause Rings Out

By Robert C. Albright

Cordell Hull yesterday returned to the scene of many a tariff drubbing and free trade defeat to be acclaimed by both Houses of Congress and both political parties for his zenith achievement—the Pact of Moscow.

Before a congressional joint session—former colleagues straining to catch every twangy Tennessee accent—Hull told of a four-nation choice between postwar "international anarchy" and concerted action for common security.

There were no secret agreements and none were suggested, the wan Secretary of State assured an applauding Congress. Nor were there, nor will there be, decisions on boundaries until after the war ends, he said.

But he made plain a conviction that the peace base laid at Moscow will steadily extend in scope and effectiveness, ending the need any longer for spheres of influence alliances, or balance of power.

Masters of Our Fate

His words, which fell so low at times that some passages did not reach to the gallery, concluded on this determined note:

"By the procedure of cooperation with other nations likewise intent upon security we can and will remain masters of our own fate."

The man who once talked to almost empty House and Senate chambers in his pre-Cabinet days as a legislator, packed them into every nook and cranny of the House yesterday.

From galleries crowded with officials and the curious, his wife looked on. Only a few diplomats turned out, among them representatives of the Polish and Greek governments in exile, and the British Ambassador, Lord Halifax. But the Russian Ambassador was not present. Four of Hull's fellow Cabinet members showed up.

Tribute to Stalin

His quiet speech, first by any Cabinet officer before a joint business session, was broken a dozen times by applause and rebel yells. Most vigorously applauded was Hull's tribute to Stalin—"one of the great statesmen and leaders of this age"—and his praise of the

Roosevelt Orders Leather Workers To End Strike

By International News Service

President Roosevelt last night ordered 2000 striking leather workers in Peabody and Salem, Mass., to cease picketing and return to their jobs immediately.

The President termed the strike "inexcusable, a defiance of the War Labor Board, a challenge of government by law and a blow against the effective prosecution of the war."

The presidential order was contained in telegrams sent to James Dunn, business agent of the National Leather Workers Association (independent) at Peabody, and to Joseph P. Harrington, attorney for the organization at Salem.

"The directives of the War Labor Board are binding upon all employers and employes, and a disregard of its authority cannot be permitted," the President said.

Debate Opens With Subsidy Foes in Control

House Cheers Appeal By Sumners to Let All 'Pay Own Grub Bill'

By Christine Sadler

In full control of the House, foes of food subsidies to hold down the cost of living rode clamorously toward victory yesterday waving the thesis that each generation of full-blooded Americans can and of a right ought to "pay its own grub bill."

"If the white collar folks who haven't had raises need more money, let's get it for them," cried Representative Sumners (Democrat) of Texas, amid cheers from both sides of the aisle, "but don't let's have the spectacle in this country of grown people unwilling to pay for the grub they eat at the time they eat it."

Sumners, often called the "sage of the House," wound up the first of two days of speechmaking by members of the bipartisan coalition out to destroy the Administration's subsidy program.

GOP Walks Out on Patman

In pointed contrast to his reception was that given Representative Patman (Democrat) also of Texas, when he got a chance at the tail-end of the day to declare: "You who are trying to make farmers go against subsidies are leading them down a blind alley, and not one of you can show how prices can be kept under control and production kept up without the use of subsidies."

Almost to a man, Republicans left their seats when Patman began, having earlier made it plain they no longer intended to listen to "the same speech you have been making around here every day this week."

Patman cited a project in Sumners' home State where warworkers, paying rent of $20 a month, live in Government-built houses with an economic rent value of $50 a month. He contended "such a rent subsidy is better than having wages and prices go high enough to enable those workers to pay full economic rent."

"Of course it is better to pass on a small debt like that than to pass on the bigger debt the Government would have otherwise. It's the same

Rail Pay Rise Wins in Senate Subcommittee

Unit Upholds Views Of Truman, Denies Peril To Little Steel Formula

A Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommittee yesterday by an almost unanimous vote approved the Truman resolution overriding Administration objections to a flat 8-cent-an-hour wage increase for 1,097,000 nonoperating employes.

The subcommittee action, directly in the face of a warning by War Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson that the across-the-board increase would wreck the Little Steel formula and force him to scrap it, will be reported to the full Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on Monday.

Senate Action Uncertain

The full committee was expected likewise to report the bill but Senate action was uncertain. Although the rail brotherhoods pack a potent vote wallop, many Senators were reported hesitant to go up against the certain charge that they had breached the wage line.

Five of the six members of the subcommittee voted to report the bill. The sixth, Senator Tunnell (Democrat) of Delaware, withheld his vote pending further study of the testimony.

Four of the Senators signed a four-page joint statement challenging Judge Vinson's arguments and saying: "We find it necessary to point out that, contrary to the statement of Judge Vinson, the passage of this resolution will not disturb the Little Steel formula nor will it express directly or indirectly congressional disapproval of that formula."

Signers Listed

Signing the statement were Senators Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, subcommittee chairman, Senator Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, author of the resolution, Senator Wagner (Democrat) of New York, one of the Senate authors of the price-wage act and Senator Shipstead (Republican) of Minnesota.

Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas, while voting for the resolution, said he will submit a separate statement explaining his reasons.

"I am no judge of whether the wage increase is right or wrong" Reed told newsmen. "What I do know is that unless we pass this resolution the Government will have to take over the railroads within 60 days. There isn't a doubt the rail ballot now in progress will show an overwhelming majority for a strike.

"When the workers vote to strike, and the leaders fix a date for it, there will be no other course for the President but to take over the roads. A group around the President has been waiting for an opportunity for the Government to take them. Here would be their opportunity. I am supporting this resolution to prevent that step."

The majority statement made no mention of strike or Government ownership alternatives, contending

Ickes Cites Bargaining Authority

Was Included in White House Coal Mine Seizure Edict, He Asserts

By Ben W. Gilbert

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday stated that the presidential executive order seizing the coal mines authorized him to bargain with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, while the coal miners were on strike.

Telling a press conference that prospects were "reasonably good" that a new coal wage agreement would be made by coal operators and miners at conferences now going on under his auspices in the Department of Interior Building, Ickes sharply attacked the captive mine operators for failing to put in an appearance at the conferences.

Meanwhile, War Labor Board failure to act on a submission by Ickes governing the pay of pieceworkers under the agreement he signed with Lewis was delaying preparation of mine payrolls. Operators fear another flurry of work stoppages unless payrolls covering the first half of the month—due early next week—can be met in full and on time.

Ickes said the "captives" which provide coal for the steel industry "have caused us more trouble than any other group."

Gross Underproduction

"They underproduce grossly," Ickes said, "and then come to us with tears in their eyes and ask for metallurgical coal for their furnaces.

"St. Louis has had to go back to using coal in violation of their own anti-smoke ordinance while we supply recalcitrants with metallurgical coal to which they are not, in equity, entitled. They don't pay any attention to the wishes of their Government that they work out a contract.

"We are still hoping that they will realize that there is a war on and participate to the best of their abilities—which they are not doing."

Harry M. Moses, president of the H. C. Frick Coke Co., United States Steel subsidiary, issued the following statement in reply to Ickes:

"When it is clear that the proper governmental agencies are in accord as to the effect of the recent agreement between United Mine Workers and the coal administrator upon their situation, I feel confident that the captive coal mine operators will do everything within their power to conclude this extended controversy."

Factions Confer

While Ickes spoke, representatives of miners and operators including Lewis conferred on the floor below in the South Interior Building.

All coal producing areas except the Southern Appalachian conference were represented. Ickes said that he had no explanation of the failure of the southern group to participate, but it was learned that members of the Southern Coal Producers Association met in the after-

Bougainville Area Hit as Task Force Defies Nipponese Fleet at Rabaul

By Vern Haugland

South Pacific Headquarters (Friday), Nov. 19 (AP).—American warships, flaunting an implied challenge at the naval might of Rabaul, have ventured less than 200 miles from that Japanese fortress for the second time this month to shell enemy air bases on Buka at the northern tip of Bougainville.

The warships, warding off blows by Japanese planes which harassed their movement along the coast of invaded Bougainville, poured their shells on Buka for 45 minutes, during the predawn hours Wednesday.

On the west central coast of Bougainville, the last big enemy Solomons base barring the eastern approaches to Rabaul, American troops have fought their way inland at Empress Augusta Bay for new gains.

Their guns added more dead Japanese to a total which has grown beyond 800 since the invasion opened November 1. In contrast American losses have been little more than 100, Admiral Halsey's headquarters said.

Beachhead Reinforced

Reinforcements continue to be sent to the beachhead, headquarters disclosing the sinking of a small ship Tuesday by Japanese planes which attacked vessels in a convoy bringing in supplies and reinforcements. Losses in the sinking were said to be moderate, and two of the attacking planes were shot down.

Although Japanese float planes and torpedo planes attacked intermittently for hours during the warships' movement toward Buka, the ships were not interfered with by planes during the bombardment.

Japanese planes reappeared on the trip back dropping white and green flares but failing to attack. One of the planes definitely was shot down by the ships' antiaircraft.

Reconnaissance fliers went over Buka after the naval bombardment and reported that the runway and dispersal areas, where planes are kept, had been throroughly covered by the shells.

Pounded Into Uselessness

Southern Bougainville's airfields have been continuously pounded into uselessness since late October.

The American positions on Bougainville now extend for 4 miles along the beach and a considerable distance inland.

Continued Japanese ground activity was observed 9 miles southeast at the Jaba River. That is in the direction of the bypassed enemy garrison around Buin.

Dauntless dive-bombers attacked the enemy Jaba positions Tuesday.

In addition to the estimated Japanese losses of more than 800 in the Bougainville ground fighting, a small group of Japanese has been taken prisoner. An unesti-

Nazi Attack May Hasten Day

By William B. King

Ankara, Nov. 17 (Delayed) (AP).—Turkey is giving sub rosa assistance to the Allied armed forces which closely approximates that which the United States gave Britain before Pearl Harbor.

The secret aid, details of which cannot be disclosed, is rapidly carrying the nation toward a war footing.

(A Turkish radio transmission recorded by the U. S. foreign broadcast intelligence service said Saffet Arikan, Turkish Ambassador to Germany, had left Berlin Wednesday night for Ankara, "where he will remain for some time.")

There is little doubt that her course has been set and that Turkey will became a full fledged fighting member of the United Nations, probably by spring.

Continued Turkish aid to the Allies might lead to a token attack by the Nazis on Turkish soil and bring the whole gathering storm into the open.

The Moscow conference was so obviously a turning point in the war that Turkey, I believe, feels it is politically necessary that she turn from her role of neutrality, even though that role has been of tremendous benefits to the Allies.

If Turkey grants air and naval bases to the Allies it will be tantamount to open warfare. This doubtless will not be done until Turkey's coast and large port cities are fully protected against aerial assault.

Turkey already has developed elaborate airports and landing fields which hardly need more than the arrival of Allied bombing planes and their crews to be transformed into bases for far-reaching operations against Axis-held territory. Turkey's army, made up of some of the bravest soldiers in the world, probably could not go into action before spring in any event, since the winter in Thrace is not fighting weather.

House Passes Bill to Delay Father Draft

Vote Is Unanimous; Overwhelming Senate Approval Predicted

By the Associated Press

The House voted unanimously yesterday to put prewar fathers at the bottom of the draft pool.

The legislation, approved after less than half an hour of debate amid predictions that few, if any, prewar fathers will be needed after the first of the year, was sent to a recessed Senate where its overwhelming approval is expected Monday.

Outgrowth of a late-summer congressional drive to halt the induction of fathers, the legislation represents a compromise between the Senate and the House, having been written by a conference committee after the two branches passed separate bills last month.

It does not prohibit the induction of prewar fathers but it does require that they be called only after the Nation-wide pool of available nonfathers has been exhausted. Available nonfathers are those not deferred for occupational or other reasons.

By prohibiting the induction of men because of their occupations, the legislation in effect nullifies a recent War Manpower Commission order, listing certain occupations as nondeferrable regardless of the dependency status of the occupant.

To guarantee a steady source of manpower for the armed forces, the legislation provides that the prewar fathers be called last "under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe on the basis of the best inventory information available to him at the time of allocating calls, without affecting the usual regular and orderly flow of the Nation's manpower into the armed forces."

This language, committee members explained, would prevent a

British Smash Enemy Move Along Sangro

Forts and Mitchells Blast Nazi Airfields In Athens Region

By Noland Norgaard

Algiers, Nov. 18 (AP).—German preparations for a counterattack along the middle sector of the Sangro River Front were smashed yesterday by the concentrated fire of Eighth Army artillery, while continued heavy rains converted many rivers and creeks along the Italian battle line into raging torrents.

Diverted from Italian targets by the unfavorable weather, American Flying Fortresses and B-25 Mitchells again turned their wrath against important enemy airdromes in the Athens area in a continuing effort to curb German air power that was so effective in overcoming the British and Italian defenders of Leros Island in the Aegean.

No Planes Lost

The unescorted Fortresses flew through a heavy barrage to drop bombs on hangars, storage dumps, runways and parked aircraft at Elevsis Field, leaving towering columns of smoke behind them. Mitchells and their Lightning escort sprayed Kalamaki airdrome with bombs and bullets and left eight fires burning. Two Allied craft were lost during the day against the certain destruction of five German planes.

The only important ground action along the rain-soaked and cold Italian Front came east of the Sangro River in the vicinity of the villages of Archi and Perano, which are a mile apart and 3 miles northwest of Atessa.

There Nazi concentrations were observed just as they were moving up for a counterattack, and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's cannon blasted them into disorganized

London (Friday), Nov. 19 (AP).—The Red army has split the German armies of the Ukraine from those in White Russia with the capture of the rail junction of Korosten, on the Leningrad-Odessa and Kiev-Warsaw lines 60 miles from the prewar Polish border, Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin disclosed last night in an order of the day.

Another order of the day announced the fall of Rechitsa, a back door stronghold protecting the imperiled lower White Russian citadel of Gomel, and an early morning communique supplement said whole boatloads of panic-stricken German troops attempting to escape across the Dnieper River were wiped out.

[According to the International News Service, the London Daily Express, in a dispatch from Stockholm, quoted reports from Berlin as indicating that the Germans have abandoned their central front bastion of Gomel. The Berlin reports were quoted as saying that "after a successful shortening of the front, the Germans have extricated themselves from the Gomel pocket."]

Near Zhitomir, at the lower rim of the salient west of Kiev and where Russian units retreated slightly on Wednesday, the early morning bulletin said the Russians had killed hundreds of Germans and destroyed 57 tanks in a successful repulse of constant German counterattacks. One Soviet unit alone killed 800 infantrymen and hurled the remainder "into a disorderly retreat" after first allowing them to enter a wedge made by their tanks, it said.

Stave Off Counterattacks

Inside the Dnieper bend, where the Russians last were reported within 22 miles of Nikopol, the Russians said their troops killed 1200 Germans in staving off counterattacks.

Korosten fell late Wednesday after a two-day struggle in which the Russians under Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin forced the Uzh River and stormed the rail city, said Moscow announcements recorded here by the Soviet radio monitor. Entire trainloads of enemy booty were captured inside the city below the Pripet marshes and in one sector an

WPB Considered Best Agency to Plan Plant Reconversion

Indications appeared yesterday that the War Production Board was about to begin planning in earnest the job of converting American industry back to peacetime production.

It also appeared that Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, would stay at the helm as the main operating official handling reconversion.

Bernard M. Baruch, 73-year-old financier and head of a postwar adjustment unit in the Office of War Mobilization, made a surprise appearance before a closed session of the Steel Industry Advisory Committee of WPB and stated that, in his opinion, WPB, working with industry, should do the job, a source present revealed.

Baruch stated that he believed the agency which established the wartime controls should undo them when the time comes. Heads of the principal steel companies including Benjamin Fairless of the United States Steel Corp. attended the meeting.

Baruch said that reconversion had actually started on a limited scale and would be a gradual rather than an abrupt process. This process is generally expected to be accelerated in the period after the collapse of Germany, but before the defeat of Japan.

An imperative need was said to exist to start work immediately because of the "anything can happen" nature of the war. However, officials emphasized that they were not approaching reconversion with the idea that the war is about over,

Brighter Outlook In War Cuts Needs; No Impairment

By Samuel W. Bell

New York Tribune, Inc.

The House was informed yesterday that more than 13 billion dollars of the $59,034,000,000 appropriated for the War Department for the current fiscal year will revert to the Treasury on July 1, without impairing the war effort "unless some unforeseen situation arises."

The information was given in a statement by Representative J. Buell Snyder (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Army Appropriations Subcommittee. As the result of the committee's preliminary examination of the War Department's budget for the next fiscal year, Secretary Henry L. Stimson had agreed that a grand total of $13,163,519,000, now earmarked for the Army, can be recaptured, Mr. Snyder said.

Will Bolster Stand

Coming on the eve of House consideration of the tax bill, now cut back to $2,140,000,000 from the Roosevelt Administration's recommendation for $10,500,000,000 in additional revenue, the Snyder disclosure served as ammunition to bolster the stand Congress will make against any major tax increase on the incomes of 1944.

In addition, the Senate Postwar Economic Committee, headed by Senator Walter F. George (Democrat) of Georgia, noted in its first report that 10,000 war contracts already have been canceled with an estimated value of more than six billion dollars. Cessation of hos-

Another 'Confession' Thrown Out

Bill Would Validate Evidence Outlawed by McNabb Decision

By Joseph Paull

The furore over the McNabb decision of the Supreme Court, which ordered that persons accused of crime must be "arraigned immediately and without delay" and which vastly restricted use of confessions in trials, reached a climax yesterday when Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama, introduced a bill to eliminate its effects on evidence. Coincidentally, Justice David A. Pine threw out another confession, the second this week.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department announced it would ask the Supreme Court to review the James P. Mitchell case for clarification of the McNabb decision, and the National Sheriff's Association, meeting at the Willard, condemned the McNabb decision as having "resulted in other miscarriages of justice."

Officials of the Metropolitan Police Department expressed indignation over the McNabb decision, which states that persons accused of crime must be arraigned before a United States commissioner or other magistrate "immediately and without delay." It also excludes all confessions, voluntary or involuntary, made to police when the arraignment provision is not complied with.

The United States Attorney's office, which has seen two of its cases thrown out this year because of the McNabb decision and a third confession excluded yesterday, had several of its officials comment unfavorably on the McNabb decision.

Representative Hobbs, who spoke at the sheriffs' meeting, summarized his bill as follows:

"It provides that no violation of the law as to when a prisoner must be taken before a magistrate shall render any evidence inadmissible

The Faymonville Case

Competent Military Mission In Moscow 'Now,' Hull Says

By Frank Kelley

New York Tribune, Inc.

Another chapter in the mystery surrounding the recall of Brig. Gen. (now colonel) Philip Ries Faymonville as chief of the American Supply Mission at Moscow unfolded yesterday when Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, reporting to Congress on his visit to the Soviet capital, remarked:

"I am glad to say that there is now in Moscow a highly competent United States Military Mission, headed by Maj. Gen. John R. Deane."

Listeners in the House press gallery noted that Secretary Hull, although he did not mention Col. Famonville by name, raised his voice to emphasize the word "now" and that he raised it again to give only slightly less emphasis to the words, "highly competent."

Recalled with Colonel Faymonville and likewise reverting to the rank of colonel was Brig. Gen. Joseph Anthony Michela, former military attache at Moscow. Colonel Faymonville is due back in Washington tomorrow from Arkansas to resume work on a comparatively humdrum job in the Ordnance Department. Colonel Michela is on leave, but will return about December 1 to the Military Intelligence Division, it was learned.

In the shake-up of American military posts in Moscow that accompanied the departure of Admiral William H. Standley as Ambassador and the arrival last month of W. Averell Harriman as his successor, Rear Admiral Jack Harlan Duncan of Tacoma, Wash., who had been naval attache and formerly was an aide to Admiral Standley, was ordered back to Washington. Admiral Duncan's new duties have not been assigned.

Allies Seen Aiming At Aegean 'Heart'

War Sidelights

Petain Seen On the Verge Of Quitting

At the Swiss-French Frontier, Nov. 18 (AP).—Marshal Petain is declared by an informant with Vichy connections to have written his resignation as chief of state, to become effective unless his wish to summon a "democratic" parliament is granted.

This report could not be confirmed through direct French channels today, but the source was one not likely to accept a mere rumor. The informant said energetic negotiations still were under way in an effort to prevail upon the aged marshal to change his mind.

Reliable information was that Petain had intended to call members of the 1936 Parliament who remain in France back into session in a broadcast speech last Saturday, but the broadcast was unexpectedly canceled.

Nazi Plane Protection

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—Germany now has nearly 2000 day and night fighter planes massed to protect her centers of production, RAF squadron leader John Strachey said today in a BBC war commentary.

Bombs Fall on Sweden

Stockholm, Nov. 18 (AP).—A lane of unidentified nationality dropped bombs on the university town of Osslund northeast of Malmoe at 9:10 p. m. tonight, damaging the center of the city, the newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported. Its correspondent said incendiaries of German manufacture fell at the northern edge of Lund, a town north of Malmoe.

Sofia Education

New York, Nov. 18 (INS).—The Nazi Transocean agency said tonight that Bulgaria's capital, Sofia, bombed last Sunday by American planes, is being evacuated.

Expected to Write Off Costly Drive On Perimeter

By William Smith White

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Allies appeared tonight to be about to write off a small but costly experimental campaign against the relatively weak perimeter of the German island defenses off Greece, but there were indications that the next lunge might be against the strong heart of the enemy's Aegean line, perhaps with the aid of Turkey.

The fall of Samos, last Aegean island of consequence still in Allied hands, was by every sign imminent. Samos was under violent attack by German bombers springing from Rhodes and from nearby Cos. Berlin said briefly today that Nazi dive-bombers dropped bombs of all calibers on the island yesterday.

The Germans' capture of nearby Leros, announced Wednesday, cost them casualties greater than the total British force employed, more than 36,000 tons of shipping sunk and air losses exceeding those of the Allies by 3 to 1, British officers in Cairo said.

Sees Dividend

The British Middle East commander, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, told newspapermen in Cairo that "as a diversion the whole Aegean operation has paid us a dividend."

"In casualties alone," he said, "The Germans lost as many as our total force employed. And in breaking up German convoys we have caused irreplaceable losses because Germany has no fresh supply of shipping from which to draw."

Abandonment of perimeter fighting was because the enemy's one real source of strength in the Aegean area was air power. It was this one military factor—German possession of Rhodes and Crete and thus of bases for short-range planes in an area where the Allies had none—that already had driven the Allies out of the greater part of the arc formed by Cos, Leros and Samos and now is threatening to drive them out of the last of it.

Bases Closer to Reach

Air bases in Turkey available to the Allied command would have cured if not reversed the situation, and such bases—providing a means for going directly after the center of the enemy's power on Rhodes and Crete—seemed to be coming measurably closer to the Allied reach.

Already softening air attacks against Germany's main outer line of defense in the Aegean were well under way. Allied announcements told of heavy and damaging assaults by American Fortresses and Mitchells against the two main airdromes in the Athens area in the third raid in three days, and of attacks on Crete and Rhodes by airmen of the Middle Eastern command.

In addition, British Commandos have raided the island of Symi, which lies just north of Rhodes and earlier was retaken by the Germans, the Cairo radio said tonight. The Commandos destroyed a post-office and damaged a power station and killed 14 Germans, Cairo said.

On the Adriatic coastal sector and along the entire Fifth Army Front running to the Tyrrhenian Sea only intermittent artillery fire was reported. British troops of the Fifth Army fired on a number of small German boats seen some distance up the Garigliano River.

The enemy utilized the enforced lull to strengthen in depth his winter defense line. Official reports from both Allied armies emphasized that the Nazis were laying vast mine fields in the path of further Allied advance, particularly in the coastal areas. The rains quickly wash away any evidence betraying the mines.

Three German Messerschmitt-109 fighters were shot down by coastal air force Spitfires escorting Walrus airsea rescue flying boats. One Walrus was lost, but a sister craft succeeded in saving its crew as well as the gunner of an American Mitchell that had been forced down.

During the preceding night RAF Bostons bombed Piombino on the Italian West Coast south of Leghorn. Hits were scored among blast furnaces and coke ovens in the industrial town.

rally stems from the Moscow conference and subsequent talks in Cairo between Turkish Foreign Minister Numan Menemencioglu and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, though the best thought here still is that Eden made no specific demands on Turkey.

Menemencioglu reported on the Cairo talks last night to the parliamentary group of the People's Republican Party, and, according to a subsequent announcement, "set forth the Turkish line of conduct on the framework of a treaty of alliance with Great Britain."

The meeting, which was attended by President Inonu, said it "approved unanimously the conduct of the government."

(Apparently alarmed at the turn of events, Franz von Papen, Nazi ambassador to Turkey, returned to Germany two days ago. The Nazi-controlled Paris radio said he was received by Hitler Thursday.

One of the unsubstantiated reports going the rounds here is that Eden told Menemencioglue that Russia wanted Turkey in the war to protect her flank and as a guarantee of Turkey's faith in the Allied cause.

Menemencioglu was said to have replied that Turkey would go on helping the Allies sub rosa and would eventually enter the war against the Axis, but that for the time being she did not wish to provoke the Germans to active retaliation.

Despite Turkey's increasing cooperation with the Allies, the man in the street has not yet been prepared for approaching participation in the war and still is convinced he will not be fighting the Germans soon.

Actual war probably will not come until this necessary step has been taken.

(Although King did not say so in the foregoing dispatch, which passed through the rigid Turkish censorship, British engineers are reported to have been supervising the construction of air bases in Turkey for many months.

(At the time of the Eden-Menemencioglu talks November 5-7 it was believed the Allies were asking for the use of Turkish bases. The loss of Leros Island in the Aegean two days ago was attributed to the lack of air support for British and Italian ground troops being hammered by Nazi dive-bombers. Strategically, Turkey's territory is a natural bridgehead into the Balkans and Southeastern Europe.

Lebanon to Be Free, Says Catroux

Cairo, Nov. 18 (INS).—French, British and Lebanese conferences seeking settlement of the explosive political situation in the French-mandated republic of Lebanon appeared to be making progress tonight.

Hope of a possible early solution to the problem was seen in a formal announcement in the Lebanese capital of Beirut by Gen. Georges Catroux, former Fighting French Commissioner for Syria and Lebanon, that Lebanese independence—crux of the matter—will be "respected."

General Catroux himself proclaimed it in 1941, as well as the new constitutional legislation which, he said, he had so "liberally revised."

It was the adoption of an amendment to the constitution by the Lebanese Parliament which resulted in the reported arrest of Lebanese officials by the French authorities and the subsequent outbreaks of violence.

Last night, it was reported, two violent explosions occurred in Beirut, but there were no casualties or damage.

Bombing Is Accurate

On the beachhead's other flank at Cape Torokina, marines said that dive-bombers and torpedo bombers did such a good job in a supporting attack Monday that the bombs fell along Jap positions only 100-yards distant.

Air blows are being dealt over all sectors of Bougainville.

Mitchell medium bombers on Tuesday strafed the east coast, dropping light bombs at Kieta village which is directly across the island from Empress Augusta. Three barges north of Kieta were destroyed. The Mitchells raided as far north as Tinputs near Buka Passage which separates Bougainville from Buka.

At dawn, Tuesday, Corsairs strafed the northern tip of Bougainville.

Jap Bases Bombed

Pearl Harbor, T. H., Nov. 18 (AP). Liberator bombers of the U. S. Army's Seventh Air Force struck at enemy bases in the Gilbert and Marshall Islands on Tuesday and Wednesday, it was announced today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, extending into the fifth successive day the promised campaign to "give the Japs no rest" in the central Pacific.

There were no U.S. losses, in personnel or planes, in these latest raids, but a retaliation attack by Japanese planes on Funafuti, American base in the Ellice Islands to the south, killed two men and damaged several planes on the ground.

The Liberators which apparently have opened the centralPacific campaign to drive the Nipponese from important island groups may be operating from the Ellice group. Their base has not been disclosed and all announcements of their activity have come from Admiral Nimitz.

Large fires were started by Tuesday's raid on the airdrome area of Jaluit, in the Marshalls, and one enemy float plane probably was destroyed out of a formation that attempted to intercept. Jaluit was the target of a raid the previous day, when a ship in the lagoon was left in flames and three other vessels probably damaged.

The raid on Tarawa, major Japanese base in the Gilberts, was made about noon Wednesday. It was a low altitude and strafing attack and there was no enemy interception.

Apparently sensing that the admiral meant business, the Japanese command sent planes to raid Nanumea, American base at the northern end of Ellice Islands, on November 11, and followed this the next day with a raid on Funafuti. Minor damage was caused by both raids. One enemy plane was shot down in the strike at Nanumea.

Allies Gain in New Guinea

Southwest Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Friday), Nov. 19 (AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported today that the New Guinea jungle front has sprung into action again, with Australians beyond Allied-held Finschhafen driving inland against Japanese defenses at Sattelberg Mission. The Aussies, who captured Finschhafen early in October, began their push toward enemy holdings in the hills on Thursday morning and, at last reports, were making steady progress.

Today's communique reported more air action. Over Wewak, Allied planes shot down six Japanese planes for certain and probably bagged a seventh while losing two.

Much-bombed Rabaul was visited anew by Mitchell medium bombers which attacked Lakunai Airdrome.

Northwest of Australia near the Tanimbar Islands, two Dutch-flown Mitchells attacked a 1500-ton cargo vessel and sank it.

entire Naziz regiment (3000 men) was wiped out.

This action cut the last north-south railway available to the Germans short of the old Polish border, and General Vatutin's forces already had effectively severed the same line at Zhitomir, 45 miles to the south, to knock out German communications between their northern and southern Ukraine forces.

Stalingrad Hero Cited

Today is the first anniversary of the offensive that smashed Field Marshal Gen. Friedrich von Paulus' army at Stalingrad, and Marshal Stalin cited the Stalingrad campaign hero, Gen. Constantin Rokossovsky, for the toppling of Rechitsa after a furious three-day struggle.

The Russians attacked from the northwest and southwest to capture Rechitsa, 25 miles west of Gomel on the railway to Warsaw.

"As a result of street engagements the enemy was routed," the communique supplement said. "Individual groups of Germans attempted in panic to cross over to left bank of the Dnieper on ferries and in boats, but were wiped out."

Quantities of arms were seized in Rechita's streets by General Rokossovsky's troops as they closed in on almost-encircled Gomel, and also struck westward 25 miles to take Vasilevichi.

Thirteen thousand Russian civilians being driven "to slave labor in Germany" were freed, the communique said.

The capture of Vasilevichi put the Russians within 22 miles of Kalinkovichi, another junction on the mangled Leningrad-Odessa Railway 90 miles above fallen Korosten.

Moscow dispatches told of a new oddity in the Rechitsa attack—German troops retreating in the direction opposite from Berlin.

The Rechitsa garrison was hurled eastward across the Dnieper River.

Gomel Becoming Untenable

The enemy units were thrown into the arms of their own Gomel troops between the Dnieper and Sozh Rivers for either a last-ditch fight or a retreat northwestward along the railway running to Zhlobin. Other Russian units crossing the Sozh above Gomel already were reported within 10 miles of severing that escape hatch, and Moscow dispatches said the Gomel garrison's position hourly was becoming untenable as the Russians strove to encircle it.

Gomel, the Germans' anchor of their 200-mile White Russian line running northward to Vitebsk, also was menaced by Soviet units moving up from the south.

Marshal Stalin ordered 24 salvoes from 124 guns to commemorate the two victories as Berlin also reported heavy developing Russian attacks in the Smolensk-Orsha and Nevel sectors above Gomel, and in the Dnieper bend where other Red armies still are trying to close a gigantic trap on the enemy.

British Bombers Smash at Berlin

Attack Follows New Liberator Blow at Norway

London (Friday), Nov. 19 (AP).—Britain's heavy bombers were reported in a DNB broadcast to have attacked Berlin with fire and explosive bombs last night as the climax of three days of massive operations by RAF and American squadrons concentrating on vital components of the Nazi war machine.

The night assault followed up a smashing daylight raid by unescorted U. S. Liberators on the Germans' biggest Norwegian plane repair and maintenance depot at Kjeller, outside Oslo.

The Nazi broadcast, recorded by the Ministry of Information, suggested that the attack on Berlin was made in force.

A majority of the bombs were declared dropped on densely populated suburbs and it was said that "reports already have come in that several British bombers were shot down."

Broad Operation

The Transocean news agency, in a later broadcast, said the operation was "on a broad front" extending from the Baltic to central Germany.

In the last heavy RAF raid on Berlin, August 23, a total of 58 British bombers were lost. RAF medium Mosquitoe have attacked the capital numerous times since then, even Wednesday night.

The United States daylight blow was another precision attack meant to wipe out a vital component of the Nazi war machine.

Nine of the heavy bombers failed to complete the arduous 1200-mile round trip, but Sweden announced that three had landed on her neutral soil, with crews uninjured. One plane, Stockholm reported, burned, but the other two landed undamaged.

Returning fliers reported that the repair depot, only 11 miles northeast of Oslo, erupted in giant explosions.

The bomber gunners shot down eight German fighters.

Ludwigshafen Hit

Wednesday night, the RAF sent cascades of high explosives down on the German inland port of Ludwigshafen, the site of the world's largest chemical works, while Mosquitos, for the third time in a week, hit Berlin and other western Germany targets.

Meanwhile, German early night night raiders gave London its first alarm since November 8, this evening when they bombed an inland southeastern town, causing property damage. Some persons were rescued from debris.

The four-engined Liberators roared out in wintry blasts over the North Sea to Norway, where on Tuesday they combined with Flying Fortresses to damage heavily the Nazis' biggest electrolysis plant at Rjukan, 80 miles west of Oslo, and the Knaben mines, Germany's prime source of steel-hardening molybdenum. Two American bombers were lost in those raids, and six German fighters shot down.

Spaced between the American attacks was the highly successful RAF attack on the sprawling I. G. Farben chemical works at Ludwigshafen where high explosives, submarine parts, tanks, trucks, Diesel engines and other equipment are manufactured. One RAF bomber was lost.

RAF bomb bays this time were crammed exclusively with heavy explosives, the bulkier loads of incendiaries being omitted, the Air Ministry said.

While the heavier fleet was heaping destruction on Ludwigshafen, speedy Mosquitos gave Berlin its third drubbing in a week and also attacked other targets in western Germany. And while the daylight Liberators were over Norway, the RAF kept German targets in northern France under attack with fighters which braved a Channel storm.

The loss of one RAF bomber—"a very small percentage" of the Ludwigshafen striking force—compared with a loss of 12 the last time Ludwigshafen was bombed October 4 in a secondary attack to the raid on Frankfurt.

'Dead' Men Talk

3 Fliers Saved After 10 Days On Icy Perch

Montreal, Nov. 18 (AP).—Three RAF airmen of the transport command—one of them an American—have been rescued from a galeswept rock off Greenland where they spent ten days after their Hampden bomber crashed on a transatlantic flight, it was revealed tonight.

The men, interviewed as they sat in hospital wheelchairs here, agreed they had "come back from the dead to tell about it." All are recuperating.

Claw Way Through Ice

Before reaching the barren rock they clawed their way through an icefield in a rubber dinghy for 20 hours. Then, with the coast of Greenland in sight, they had to give up hope of landing on the sheer cliffs in high seas and take refuge on an offshore pinnacle.

Coffman lost 32 pounds and the others 25 pounds each during their 10 days as castaways. They were prepared to die in the icy slush, when rescue came by sea.

The Hampden, one of a flight being ferried from England to British Colombia, was forced down by motor trouble. The men subsisted on a few malted milk tablets, a little chocolate and three pints of water supplemented by melted snow.

Gales swept the shelterless rock constantly and there was no way to make a fire.

Mirror Aids Rescue

On the 10th day, when the three were nearly dead, a small ship carrying United States Army officers to a Greenland post, was halted by engine trouble eight miles off the rock.

While repairs were being made Maj. John T. Crowell of Isle au Haut, Me., sighted the glant of a mirror from the rock and saw a puff of smoke from Coffman's last Verey cartridge.

The small boat took off the three and, after first aid, they were flown to Montreal. All are being treated for severe frost bite and exposure.

Orientals See U. S. Taken for Ride, Hann Says

Baltimore, Nov. 18 (AP).—Kilsoo Hann, Washington representative of the Sino-Korean Peoples' League, told members of the Baltimore Advertising Club that the appointment of Lord Louis Mountbatten as commander of Allied troops in East Asia had alienated great numbers of people in the occupied areas who "have no love for the British."

Hann said that Mountbatten's appointment was a factor causing many "Orientals" to fear that we are "too concerned with the feelings of Great Britain and France."

"Orientals," he declared, "fear that America is being taken for a ride" and is being used by other nations to retain territories that might otherwise become free, adding that the hope in the Far East was that this country would "assume world leadership after the war."

Hann said his information was based on reports from espionage agents in his organization.

Britain Pictured as Trailing U. S. in Postwar Trade Plans

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—Sir Patrick Hannon, member of Parliament, addressing the annual meeting of the National Union of Manufacturers, today accused the Churchill government of lagging while the United States becomes a dominant influence in postwar international trade planning.

"We should not be mealy-mouthed in telling United States manufacturers that the two-way traffic of war should be maintained as two-way traffic in our joint reconstruction program," he asserted.

Complaining that the British government has failed to give "a considered declaration of its reconstruction policy," Sir Patrick declared:

"Conferences have been in progress in Washington for many months and the general conclusion may be drawn from these that the United States is the dominant influence in the formulation of international trade policy.

"There is a clear indication that American manufacturers are determined to secure a leading position in world trade. There is no doubt that the competitive power of the United States, if exercised without recognition of the mutual obligation between the United States and the British Commonwealth, will present from the British point of view a formidable prospect.

"With plain, wholesome common sense understanding and with a spirit of good will in give and take, there is no reason why the anxiety now entertained by British manufacturers should not be converted into mutually helpful cooperation."

Hannon also called for early statements on British and American tariff policies and noted that Britain is faced with the necessity of heavy imports of foods and materials.

"To enable us to pay for them," he said, "a large and expanding export trade is vital and it is hoped that the spirit of cooperation developed among the United Nations during the war may lead to the removal of many difficulties in the monetary and commercial spheres which so handicapped trade between the two wars."

Yugoslavian, Italian Border Closed by Nazis

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—Germany has closed the Italian-Yugoslav frontier in what appeared to be a move to block any possible merger of guerilla factions, it was reported today.

This report, broadcast by radio France at Algiers, was accompanied by a flood of unconfirmed and conflicting rumors that left nothing clear except the fact that the little countries under Hitler's heel were fishing frantically for a way out when Germany falls.

Peace demonstrations were said to be flaring up frequently in Bulgaria, and the Swiss reported that Foreign Minister M. Shishmanov of Bulgaria was in Budapest to discuss joint peace action with Hungary.

This particular report was viewed with skepticism in London, however, because of the recollection that Shishmanov had been called onto the carpet by Hitler at the Fuehrer's headquarters only two weeks ago.

Hungarians Reported Massing

Another report had Hungary massing troops along the Rumanian frontier as a threat to invade if "repressive action" against Hungarian minorities did not stop. But Hungary has made this threat before, when the going became rough, and it seemed likely to be a gesture for bargaining purposes—useful to offset a demand for more concessions by Germany. The Nazis want to avoid any clashes between their Balkan satellites.

Even Rumania, upon which the Nazis have the firmest grip with occupying troops, was reported shadow-boxing for a day of reckoning. The Budapest correspondent of the Swiss Gazette de Iausanne said King Mihil was trying to get Mihael Antonescu, cousin of the present premier, to form a democratic cabinet.

In Yugoslavia the Partisans of Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) continued to harass the German garrisons at every turn, although the communique broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio said that Nazis had brought such superior forces into action that the fighting was chiefly of a defensive nature.

A German breakthrough in eastern Bosnia, from Doboj to Tusla, was admitted, but the Partisans said fierce fighting still was going on around Tusla.

In Dalmatia, the Nazis were trying to slice through from Drnis into liberated territory and they were using tanks and motorized troops in attacks in northwestern Croatia.

The Yugoslavs claimed to have captured a coal mine near Lazarevac which had been supplying fuel for plants in Belgrade and said they had been carrying on a heavy battle with the Germans for several days near Posusje and in the Cetina River Valley.

Mosley Release Protests Mount

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—Protests mounted today among British labor organizations over the forthcoming release of Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader imprisoned since May, 1940.

The general executive council of the Transport and General Workers Union called the action an "insult to the people in the fighting services."

Sir Oswald is married to Lady Dianna Mosley, the former Dianna Guinness and a sister of Miss Unity Mitford, former friend of Hitler. Lady Dianna is confined with Sir Oswald. The home office announced they would be released on medical grounds.

Brewster Plant Seat of Sin, Sex, Sabotage, De Lorenzo Still Boss, Kenneally Declares

By Mary Spargo

Testimony on sin, sex and sabotage at the Johnsville, Pa., factory of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. was spread on the record of the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee yesterday by a security officer, who termed the plant "Bucks County Playhouse," and suggested drafting all eligible males there.

Daniel J. Kenneally, assistant plant security manager at Johnsville, told the committee that Thomas V. De Lorenzo, president of Local 365 UAW-CIO, was still running the Brewster plants. He declared the Navy Department was helpless to remedy any of the conditions he described because of the labor policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

Kenneally revealed that he had been notified last Friday by the new management of Henry J. Kaiser to look for another job because "Tom De Lorenzo doesn't like me."

Evidence of sabotage at the plant is held in his own desk at the plant, the security officer said, for the benefit of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Kenneally, who was formerly employed in New York as a civilian by the Office of Naval Intelligence, told of ignition wires being cut and cables filed after the Navy had inspected the planes. The cables were so filed that they would snap in use, he asserted.

One plane, he said, was discovered with all wires cut, so that it took four days to repair it. Another plane had to go to repairs for two days because the cables controlling the rudder were cut.

He said he had found it impossible to discover who had committed these acts, because the union by-laws prohibited members from telling on their fellows.

Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia read from an official Government report before questioning the witness about charges of sex immorality at the plant.

"It has been noted," Drewry read, "that males and females spent time together inside planes in the shop."

Kenneally said that female employes of the plant came back at night to join guard friends in the fuselages of planes.

He said he did not investigate such instances because it would have been useless.

"They were union brothers and sisters," he said.

Questioned about allegations that time cards of employes were falsified, Kenneally said he had been asked by the FBI to withhold information on this as the matter is no wonder investigation. He said the same situation was true of alleged "kick backs" in the purchasing department.

Thefts from the plant by employes were commonplace, the witness indicated. He said delivery of planes to the Navy had been delayed because compasses, clocks and other instruments were stolen after planes were completed.

Act Like "Mummies"

In one year the plant lost more than $50,000 in thefts, Kenneally said. He declared that guards, even now, refused to do their jobs and do not protect the plant against losses. He said the only person ever caught stealing from the Johnsville factory was picked up by the Pennsylvania State police.

Guards at the plant are still acting like "mummies," Kenneally said, while Kaiser is trying to straighten out the situation which makes them members of the Coast Guard Reserve (Temporary), members of the union, and guards responsible to management.

The Brewster plants at the present time on the basis of production records are at least 50 per cent overstaffed, Kinneally told the committee.

He said that on the basis of its capacity to produce the plant is still overstaffed by 25 per cent. He added that there were a great many draft-age employes who could well be spared for military service.

"A little service in the armed forces might do some of these men a lot of good," Kenneally said.

He told the committee he was of draft age himself but had so far been deferred as 3-A because he is a pre-Pearl Harbor father.

Morale at the plant had somewhat improved since Kaiser became active as president, Kenneally said.

"If you had been one of the downtrodden masses," he added, "and suddenly a new superoir came in and granted your every wish, you'd be pleased, too," he added.

Time to Plan Reconversion Seen at Hand

but because they do not know with any certainty when it will end, and hence must be prepared.

An informed Administration source revealed that it was planned to call in representatives of each industry in turn and ask them to state the industry's peacetime requirements. Separate conferences will be held with representatives of organized labor to get their views and coordinate them with the views of industry. Plans would then be worked out to dovetail the job of starting up peacetime industry with the job of slowing down and stopping war industry.

Officials were said to be determined, however, that the manufacture of war munitions be halted as soon as the need for them stop, instead of permitting make-work production to continue, wasting valuable resources.

Baruch stated that he was not speaking officially. He was understood to have indicated that he does not plan to do the actual operational job of reconversion, although he was prepared to serve in an advisory capacity.

Baruch said that he had discussed reconversion problems with Nelson and indicated that they were in agreement.

Nelson's readiness to stay on to do the job was said to be conditioned that WPB not be demoted to the status of a "second rate" agency. He was said to welcome advice and assistance from Baruch who was the head of the World War I Industries Board, but prepared to insist that he receive power over reconversion policy as well as operational authority.

Baruch was said to have informed the steel men that reconversion, once decided upon, must be accomplished speedily, because the time factor would have great bearing on reemployment prospects.

However, no industrial group should be permitted to jump the gun, he said.

He indicated that he believed the transition would be a major job—the second part of the big job that we have to do. Meanwhile, no let-up in production for war must be permitted, he said.

Allocation controls over materials would be maintained until the end of the war, one source said, to prevent any interference with the war program.

To do the job, WPB would not need control over the terms of war contract termination, one official said, but would require a voice in their timing. Actual contract settlement would be left to the procurement agencies which signed them in the first place.

Questions of timing contract terminations and other contract termination questions could be threshed out in the production executive committee of the WPB, it was said.

WPB Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson heads the committee at present, but it was understood that Nelson would take over the post when Wilson leaves the WPB about January 1 to return to the presidency of the General Electric Corp. The committee is composed of representatives of WPB, War Manpower Commission and the military procurement agencies.

Its actions would then be coordinated woth the work of other Government agencies through normal WPB channels.

One phase of reconversion was said to be beyond the scope of WPB—the disposition of the many Government-built war plants. Baruch was said to have told the steel men that he favored turning them over to private industry as much as possible, leaving only strictly military arsenal-type establishments in Government hands.

Bishop Broderick Dies At Hospital in New York

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Most Rev. Bonaventure Finnbarr Broderick, 74, titular bishop of Juliopolis and auxiliary bishop of Havana, died today at Frances Schervier Hospital, Riverdale.

Bishop Broderick was born in Hartford, Conn. He was graduated from St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md., in 1891. He was ordained in 1896 in Rome after having attended the North American College there. Upon retiring from administrative work, Bishop Broderick took up residence at the hospital where he died.

with some of the vegetable canners who have been getting subsidies to help pay increased wages in some critical areas. Anybody knows it is cheaper to pay the canner subsidy in particular places than to have the cost of canned goods go up all over the country.

"The Government alone buys enough food to save many dollars on its purchases for every dollar put into a food subsidy."

Representative Steagall (Democrat) of Alabama, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee which reported in the bill containing the subsidy ban, made an hour-long speech in which he declared subsidies are inflationary in that they put more money in the pockets of consumers at a time when goods are scarce.

"Frankly," he said, "I do not think the price control line can be held intact. I am in favor of price control, but think the best way is to have a little more flexibility in it. Subsidies are an appeasement measure not based on common sense. They are part of the old illusion based on the idea that what the Federal Government pays does not cost anybody anything."

Farmers have had an unfair position in the American economy for more than 50 years, Steagall said, and are having to pay the subsidies that keep them from getting fair prices. "That's one of the worst things about subsidies," he declared. "The profiteer and everybody benefits from them and they are then paid for by taxes levied on the poor persons as well as on the rich."

Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts, who had earlier argued "a vote for this bill is a vote for inflation," missed most of the issues involved, Steagall declared. "This is not a question of inflation we are arguing about," he said.

Steagall said no effort had been made by the Administration to keep wages and prices in alignment and that wages have been outdistancing retail food prices all during the war.

Representative Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan declared subsidies are an attempt to socialize agriculture.

Coupled with the ban against subsidies in the bill under discussion is the provision for extending life of the Commodity Credit Corporation for 18 months. No additional funds for CCC is contained in the measure, but Steagall said, "Of course, if it needs funds it can get them. My understanding is no additional money is needed by the agency if the subsidies are not to be paid."

Meantime, leaders of the CIO, the AFL and the Farmers' Union yesterday made pleas for continuing the subsidy program.

James G. Patton, president of the farmer group, wrote Representative Patman that "working farmers generally prefer known markets at known fair prices to gambling for higher and higher prices with a certainty that they will be cleaned out in the end."

Lieut. Willey Formerly of D. C., Killed in Crash

Lieut. Howard Thatcher Willey, Marine pilot, was killed Tuesday in a plane crash in the Mojave Desert, the Navy Department yesterday informed his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard H. Willey of 1628 Argonne pl. nw.

WILLEY

Lieut. Willey's brother, Maj. Robert H. Willey, who has also been stationed in the desert area, will return here with the body. No date for the funeral services has been set.

A native of Salt Lake City, Utah, Lieutenant Willey came here as a youth. He attended Central High School and George Washington University before becoming employed by the New York Life Insurance Co. here. He entered the Navy as an air cadet in June, 1942, and, transferred to the Marine Corps, won his wings in July, 1943.

A sister, Mrs. Wilford G. Kener of Arlington, Va., also survives.

Vote to Restore Full Subsidies Urged by Katz

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, yesterday urged passage of a House committee's minority report "for the restoration of full subsidies for price rollbacks, provision for which was cut from the Commodity Credit Corporation bill," in a letter to all Maryland congressmen.

Expressing the opposition of "our members to any compromise on this issue which directly affects their capacity to increase production for the fighting front," Katz cited President Roosevelt's food message to Congress which pointed out that "subsidies check inflationary tendencies through preventing price increases, stimulate production, and encourage the distribution of food through normal legitimate channels."

father from going to court to resist induction on the ground a nonfather was available somewhere else, and would meet objections of the Selective Service System to the originally-proposed ironclad ban against father-inductions while nonfathers were available.

Quotas on Nation-wide Basis

The bill puts the quotas on a Nation-wide basis, the effect being to relieve States having no one left but fathers from meeting monthly quotas so long as others have a pool of nonfathers. Similarly the induction of fathers within a State would follow State instead of local board lines.

To be considered a father under the legislation, a man must have been married prior to December 8, 1941, and have a child or children born before September 15, 1942.

Representative Kilday (Democrat) of Texas told the House during yesterday's debate the legislation should curtail the number of prewar fathers drafted this year, and added a belief few, if any, such men would be needed next year on the basis of the present outlook.

It is assumed that monthly quotas starting in January can be filled by youths becoming 18 and by older men reclassified from 4-F Kilday told the House. He estimated 65,000 teen-age youths would be available monthly for replacement purposes next year.

OWI Won't Carry Election Campaign To Men Overseas

By the Associated Press

The Office of War Information will make no broadcasts nor send any printed material about forthcoming political campaigns to troops overseas, its spokesmen asserted yesterday.

Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, co-author of the servicemen's vote bill, said this week he hoped that OWI would keep its shortwave sendings to troops in foreign battle zones clear of political discussions.

The content of broadcasts to troops overseas, OWI said, is determined solely by the Special Services Division of the War Department.

Officials added that any foreign reports of political campaigns would follow a policy set forth by Robert Sherwood, OWI overseas director, in a statement before a House Appropriations subcommittee. He said that OWI would advertise the fact of campaigns and the free election only as demonstrating the continuation of American democracy in the midst of war.

noon on whether to participate in the discussions.

Their eventual participation was considered likely.

The operator-miner conference did not get down to a discussion of detailed wage and working conditions, it was understood. However, operators made it clear that any contract they signed must be made conditional on approval of an adequate price adjustment by the Office of Price Administration. Some operators suggested that they be allowed to leave the mines in Government hands, settling up in the Court of Claims after the war, if the price adjustment proved unsatisfactory.

House Organs, He Says

Ickes explained his negotiation with the miners during the strike by say, "I was trying to settle the strike, which I did."

"I notice that some of the newspapers—which should more properly be called the house organs of big business—have become so terribly cut up about negotiating during a strike," Ickes said.

"Why that's what a strike's for.

"I was told to negotiate a contract and mine coal. We negotiated a contract and are mining coal. You have to be a realist when you have a job to do."

Asked if he interpreted the President's order as authorization to negotiate immediately, he replied, "Yes."

A reporter then commented that the War Labor Board, which was disturbed by the negotiations in violation of its set policy, had "a row with the President."

Ickes said, "I wouldn't call it a row. Those who object to negotiating with the miners while they were on strike should read the President's order."

Failure to secure technical clarification of the agreement between Ickes and Lewis was delaying the operator-miner conferences, it was learned. One operator stated, "I'm not buying any pig in a poke," a reference to a prevailing assumption that the Ickes-Lewis agreement with minor modification may become the permanent agreement covering the coal industry.

Refrigerators, Irons, Washers Hoped For in 1944

The Office of Civilian Requirements hopes to make two million electric irons, 900,000 household washing machines and 900,000 domestic refrigerators in 1944, informed Government sources said yesterday.

This tentative program is very much open to change because of shortages of manpower and plant facilities as well as stringent bottlenecks in small electric motors and wire.

However, the War Production Board expects to get the electric irons under way in the first three months of next year, and the refrigerators and washing machines before the second or third quarter.

Released by Hospital, Patient Held in Murder

William J. Holman, 23, Negro, was arested yesterday by police on a murder charge as soon as he was released from St. Elizabeths Hospital on a writ of habeas corpus. Holman will be taken to Norfolk, Va., where he faces the charge, police said.

Holman, formerly in the Navy, was ordered to the hospital last April by the Secretary of the Navy, and was discharged from the Navy in June while in the asylum. Justice Letts ruled that since Holman is no longer in the Navy, he cannot be detained in the hospital without a sanity hearing. The murder charge is in connection with the slaying of an inn keeper in Norfolk.

simply that the 8-cent-an-hour increase is in line with the Price Stabilization Act and subsequent presidential orders.

"The gross misinterpretation of this act," they said, "has caused so much confusion that congressional clarification seems necessary."

Their statement recalled that the 8-cent increase was recommended by the May 24 presidential emergency board and approved August 7 by the carriers and employes. Vinson set aside this recommendation but later approved a second emergency board finding for sliding scale increases, ranging from a 10-cent increase for lower paid workers to 4 cents for higher paid.

"If eight cents does violence to Little Steel, what does four to 10 cents do to it?" argued the majority statement. "The payroll under Judge Vinson's proposal would differ by less than 1 per cent from the payroll if the wage agreement which he disapproves were made effective. Obviously the railroad industry wage agreement is not inflationary since Judge Vinson maintains that his substitute is not inflationary."

The majority statement charged "the arbitrary sliding-scale proposed by Judge Vinson would destroy existing wage differentials, and would be contrary to sound industrial practice and in violation of the directive of Justice Byrnes on which Judge Vinson claims to rely."

Johnson told newsmen the directive, dated November 26, 1942, declared "wage differentials which are established are normal to American industry and they will not be disturbed by the (War Labor) board."

Hoyle Pleads Guilty to Charge Of Pandering

Oscar C. Hoyle, 21, Negro, of 1221 10th st. nw., pleaded guilty yesterday to pandering when arraigned before Justice Matthew F. McGuire. Hoyle was indicted with three others said to have engaged in transporting an 18-year-old girl from West Virginia to engage in prostitution here.

The others, all of whom await arraignment, are Ewell Tasker, 29; Robert Lee Wheeling, jr., 26, and Julia Irma Larger, 27. All are from Roanoke, Va.

New Delhi, Nov. 18 (AP).—Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, 46, deputy chief of staff to Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, received the Distinguished Service Medal today from Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Bill Would Curb McNabb Decision's Effect on Evidence

Charles Fahy, solicitor general, said he had authorized presentation of the James P. Mitchell case to the Supreme Court for a review. This case is similar to the McNabb case in that police held Mitchell for seven days. However, only oral statements and the loot from two robberies were used in the District Court trials.

Mitchell, 26-year-old rooming-house operator here, was convicted during the summer of housebreaking and larceny in two fashionable homes. Testimony by police in the District Court trial was that Mitchell shortly after his arrest orally admitted the thefts and gave police permission to take from his home what they described as the loot from more than a dozen homes. Mitchell said he was beaten by police and denied the confession.

He was convicted in District Court, but the United States Court of Appeals, acting under the McNabb decision, reversed the decision.

Justice Pine yesterday threw out the purported confession of Monroe D. Neely, 35, Negro, indicted on a charge of first-degree murder, or murder in the commission of a felony. Neely was charged with shooting last May of Policeman Charles R. Johnston, 25, when the officer came to arrest him. The indictment said Neely shortly before had twice shot his own wife.

But this time the confession was not regarded as vital to the Government's case and Assistant United State Attorney John L. Ingoldsby continued prosecution. The case is expected to go to the jury today.

Neely was arrested on the Saturday night of the shooting, was taken to police headquarters, where he is said to have confessed, and was not out of the custody of police until he appeared before the coroner on the following Monday at 11:30 a. m.

Justice Pine declined to rule on whether the coroner was a magistrate within the meaning of the McNabb decision but stated that at any rate the "immediate and without delay" provision had not been complied with.

House Tax Bill Is Overestimated, Treasury Says

By the Associated Press

The House Ways and Means Committee formally delivered the second wartime tax bill yesterday and its figures of $2,140,000,000 in new revenue were challenged by the Treasury as being 93 million dollars too high.

The measure would bring in only $2,047,000,000, said the Treasury. The committee's higher figure was supplied by Colin F. Stam, head of the tax staff employed by Congress.

In either event, it is a long way from the 10½ billion dollars the Treasury first suggested.

Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas, set Tuesday for the opening of House debate on the measure.

Parley Opens Today

The second city-wide conference of the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations will begin today at 8 p. m. at John F. Cook School. Speakers from the Children's Bureau and the War Production Board will talk about "Vocational Education Is the Salvation of Youth."

Ration Point Loan Denied Restaurateur

Ration point loans for Mrs. Lillian Jean Richards, proprietor of "The Stables," a restaurant at 2622 E st. nw., was refused yesterday by the local OPA as the result of the failure of Mrs. Richards to supply requested information in connection with the loan, Robert K. Thompson, local director, announced.

The OPA asserted that an overdraft to the amount of 68,261 points of meats, fats and oils had been found in Mrs. Richards' restaurant ration account.

As a result the restaurant was suspended from receiving meats, fats and oils, as of November 1, and such time as the accounts were balanced.

Mrs. Richards appealed for a "loan" of points in order, she said, to be able to continue to operate.

She was requested to furnish to the OPA data as to how she planned to operate and at the same time make up the overdraft and, according to Thompson, this she failed to do and the loan was refused.

Ship Repairmen Sought

The Navy recruiting office at the Alexandria Postoffice Building, 200 South Washington st., is accepting applications for enlistment in the ships repair units, it was announced yesterday by Chief Petty Officer H. E. Bowman, officer in charge.

Bowman said that any man between the ages of 18 and 50 who has a trade as carpenter, electrician, welder or other skilled craft, may qualify for a petty officer rating in the ships repair unit upon passing a physical examination.

Short-Circuit 'Alert'

The air raid siren atop the new Municipal Center Building blasted for 2 minutes starting at 9:19 last night throwing most of the Police Headquarters' offices into frenzied blackout activity.

Switchboard operators, building guards and the press room thinking the alarm was an actual air raid test hastened to draw blackout curtains and prepared for the usual rush of events. The police radio dispatcher ended preparations when he announced the alarm was caused by a short circuit.

SPAR Anniversary

Six hundred SPARS stationed here will join with high-ranking Government officials to celebrate the first anniversary of the Women's Reserve of the U. S. Coast Guard at Sunday services in Washington Cathedral, it was announced yesterday.

Lieut. Comdr. Merrit F. Williams, USNR, cathedral canon on leave as a member of the faculty of the Navy's chaplain training school in Williamsburg, Va., will preach the sermon.

Guests of honor will include Rear Admiral and Mrs. Randall Jones, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harry Hamlet, Admiral and Mrs. Ernest King, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. James Forrestal, Lieut. Comdr. Mildred McAfee, Maj. Ruth Cheney Streeter, Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, Senior Comdr. Pamela Hammick.

Fixed Income Subsidy Stake Held Greatest

Close to 33 million people—Government employes, families of servicemen, pensioners, service and utility industry workers and others with fixed incomes—will be the immediate sufferers of food price rises if Congress defeats the subsidy plan, Representative James A. Wright (Democrat) of Pennsylvania last night told a meeting of the District Council of Federal Workers, CIO, in the Archives Auditorium.

But the final blow will fall on the entire country, he declared, sending the Nation into an inflationary spiral which will "wreck our economy."

Government farm subsidies, he pointed out, are the only way farmers can be assured full compensation for producing the food necessary to win this war while still keeping consumer prices under inflationary levels.

The average little farmer—who actually produces most of our food—is not the source of opposition to subsidies, Wright said. It is the large farm blocs, headed by the National Grange and the Farm Bureau, which are resisting this method of checking food price rises. Back of their stand is a desire to profit as much as possible from the emergency, even at the risk of eventual inflation which, he stated, would ruin the farmer as well as the rest of the country.

Methods of enforcing legal prices for food commodities in day-to-day buying were demonstrated by Sherman Dodge, price panel coordinator for the District OPA, and members of his staff.

Commissioners Due To Act Today On Recommendations

District Commissioners will act today on recommendations to smooth operation of the city's ambulance dispatching service, promulgated following an alleged delay in arrival of an ambulance with a doctor to treat a boy at Juvenile Court.

Recommendations will be to change the telephone listing on the cover of the telephone book from the police central bureau number to a direct line at the ambulance control center; to reconvene the committee which mapped the service to discuss the system; and to notify police that if a scout car ambulance squad is sent to the scene of an emergency no other service will be sent unless some member of the squad places the call for additional service.

The proposals will be submitted by Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, who based them on reports from all parties concerned in the Juvenile Court cases. Commissioner Guy Mason already has approved the proposals.

Stofberg, in making his report and recommendations, reviewed the case history of the Juvenile Court call, pointing out that the control center telephonist and the court clerk, who called for the ambulance, disagreed on how the message was transmitted. The center says the call indicated there had been a shooting, while the court clerk maintains she clearly stated that medical attention was needed for an old gunshot wound which had reopened.

Doctor on Scene

"However," Stofberg said, "a doctor was on the scene to provide first aid; a piece of equipment, a police scout car, responded immediately; the police were informed that an ambulance had been called and when it became apparent that an ambulance was not on its way, the police scout car requested same, which was immediately dispatched."

Stofberg said the scout car squad should have told the doctor at Juvenile Court that the scout car was acting as an ambulance in this case.

He explained that no subsequent help is sent to a scene of emergency unless requested by someone from the first vehicle dispatched. This is to prevent dispatching of duplicate equipment, he said.

The central ambulance dispatching service has been in effect in the District since September 1 Stofberg said that during the month of October a total of 206 calls were handled by the Police Scout Car Ambulance without mishap.

J. G. Capossela, superintendent of Emergency Hospital, and member of the committee formulating the dispatch system, expressed regret at criticism of the service following the Juvenile Court occurrence. He said, "As we all know, when a new plan is put into operation, there are always bound to be difficulties arising now and then."

He proposed any complaints about the system should be sent to the head of the dispatch system, who should be permitted to call on the committee which formulated the system for ways and means of correcting any defects of the system. He said the committee should forward a written investigation to the Commissioners.

Festival Tonight

The District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross will entertain over 100 servicemen at a Thanksgiving festival at a local artillery post today from 9 p. m. to 12 midnight. Arrangements for the party were made by the Gray Ladies.

A Settlement

Hayworth's 'Ex' Agrees To Keep Mum

RITA HAYWORTH

Los Angeles, Nov. 18 (AP).—Terms of a property settlement between Screen Actress Rita Hayworth and her former husband, Edward Charles Judson, under which he received virtually all her listed community property in return for, among other things, agreeing not to accuse her of moral turpitude, have been disclosed in Superior Court.

Provisions of the agreement were made known upon the unsealing of an attachment suit filed by Judson September 8, but subsequently dismissed.

The suit charged that Miss Hayworth promised to pay Judson $500 monthly until $12,000 was turned over, but that she had defaulted after paying only $2000. Judson's lawyers said they dropped the action two weeks ago because "a substantial cash settlement had been reached."

Under the previously secret property pact disclosed when the new attachment suit was filed, Judson, who was divorced May 22, 1942, promised to turn over to Miss Hayworth all documents bearing her signature and under his control; not sell or give away, circulate or publish any matter arising out of their marital relationship; not to imply directly or indirectly that she had ever committed an offense of moral turpitude under Federal, State or local laws or that she had conducted herself in any manner which would cause her to be held in scorn.

Community property she turned over, as part of the agreement, included all their stock holdings, including 200 shares of Columbia Pictures common, 200 shares of 20th Century-Fox Pictures preferred and 150 shares of Metal Assemblies Corp.

Hoyt and Allen Will Quit OWI About January 1

Palmer Hoyt, director of the Domestic Branch of the Office of War Information, announced yesterday that he and Charles L. Allen, chief of the OWI news bureau, will resign about January 1.

Hoyt, who succeeded Garner Cowles, jr., in June as Domestic Director, said he will return to his post as editor and publisher of the Portland Oregonian because "there are a lot of things that need attending to out there." He said he had come to OWI with the intention of staying six months, and this time would be up about December 20.

Allen, who succeeded George Lyon as news bureau head only last month, said he plans to return to Northwestern University.

WPB Backing Campaign for Old Clothing

The District Salvage Committee, in conjunction with Washington churches, announced yesterday, through its chairman, James E. Colliflower, the beginning of an intensified drive to secure clothing for the rehabilitated poulations of liberated countries and for relief purposes in this country.

The drive, which will extend from November 22 to December 4, will be conducted at the request of the War Production Board, which also urged the contribution of rags, which are critically needed.

The Salvage Committee asked the public to search their homes thoroughly, bundle up all items of discarded but wearable clothing, and deliver them to the nearest church.

To Pool Collections

The Textile Requirements Committee of the WPB will allocate the total collections to the most essential domestic and foreign needs in the rehabilitation program, it was said.

Churches are requested to appoint committees of women to be responsible for the drive and to carry it out in their localities.

Among the charitable organizations which will participate in the drive are the Salvation Army, Goodwill Industries, the District Chapter of the Red Cross and the Volunteers of America. The church committees are instructed to turn the clothing over to one of these organizations, which will sort it and have it dry cleaned.

Appeal From Lehman

Former Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York, now director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, telegraphed yesterday to H. M. Faust, director of the Salvage Division of WPB, urging that full support be given the drive by all Government agencies. In addition Governor Lehman's statement said:

"The giving of clothing which you no longer need may well save the life of some man, woman or child overseas who might otherwise die for the want of the simplest garments. It is certain to provide hope and the will to work for the better world which must come with the peace."

Daycare Centers to Stay Open on Thanksgiving

The District's daycare centers and nursery school services for children of working mothers will remain open on Thanksgiving to accommodate children of Federal employes who will work on that day, it was announced yesterday.

Officials urged that parents who can be at home on Thanksgiving keep their children there in order to give them the benefit of a normal home holiday. It was also announced that Thanksgiving parties will be held at centers the day before Thanksgiving.

Postlude

Performance at Arts Club Called Intelligent and Vital

By Ray C. B. Brown

Arts Club of Washington presents Kay Rickert and Helen McGraw on Thursday night in a recital of sonatas for violin and piano. Program: Sonata in C sharp minor, Op. 21 (Dohnanyi), Sonata-Fantasia No. 1, "Des Esperances" (Villa-Lobos), Sonata in A (Pizzetti).

Once again one has occasion to congratulate Kay Rickert and Helen McGraw on their initiative and independance in their choice of compositions for their sonata recitals, which have only one fault—that of being too infrequent. Convention being as powerful as it is upon the maker of programs, it takes courage as well for two young artists to defy its dictates. They have never failed yet to show excellent taste in the novelties they select or to discuss remarkable consentience in their readings. Their playing is intelligent, sensitive and vital, marked by insight and the ability to communicate meaning, and members and guests of the Arts Club who heard them last evening were rewarded with an enjoyable experience.

Erno von Dohnanyi's C sharp minor sonata is not a novelty in the strict sense of the word, for it has been recorded by Lionel Tertis. But the record has been withdrawn and not many private libraries contain it, while public performances are few and far between. The sonata, one of the finest works from Dohnanyi's pen, represents him in his early maturity of 36 while he was still in his richly romantic stage. Lyrical and impassioned, the music has a contagious elan and vigor of imagination. The harmonic idiom is conventional and the form orthodox, but there is strength in the utterance and the long melodic themes have beauty in their lines. The affinities of the music are with Schumann and Brahms, but the style is individual.

To the best of my knowledge, the first sonata-fantasia of Heltor Villa-Lobos had not been played here before. Very little of the Brazilian composer's chamber music circulates in this country, and that is a pity, for his indviduality is stamped upon everything he writes, and a very interesting individuality it is. This one-movement sonata is in free rhapsody manner, poetic, fanciful and urgently emotional. The music has atmospheric charm while remaining in the "absolute" domain, for it contains no trace of the native themes that Villa-Lobos so frequently employs.

Ildebrando Pizzetti's sonata is an admiral work obviously programmatic in its implications. Composed in 1919, it refers quite patently in the first movement to the war from which Italy had recently emerged; its content is that of spiritual conflict. Another reference lies in the title of the second movement, "Prayer for the Innocents," and the final vivacious movement is buoyant with hope in a better world. If one is looking for an affinity here, it is to be found with Cesar Franck, though Pizzetti is not so contemplative or serene. The strong liturgical feeling in the "Prayer," however, points to a kinship. Pizzetti has disclosed his imaginative sweep in the broader form of opera, but this sonata affords a glimpse of the lyric poet who speaks with poignance and a singularly eloquent tone.

4 Hurt in 2 Auto Accidents

Four persons were injured, two of them seriously, in traffic accidents early yesterday.

John C. Hoyt, 70, of 4749 MacArthur blvd. nw., was admitted to Georgetown Hospital suffering from a possible skull and nose fracture and other head injuries received when the car he was drivng collided with the rear part of a D. C. refuse truck in the 4500 block of MacArthur blvd. nw.

Anthony F. Iscone, 19, of 4010 Minnesota ave. ne., was taken to Casualty Hospital with a possible concussion after the auto he was operating ran over the curb and struck a street, light pole at 49th st. and Central ave. ne. His condition was reported as undetermined.

Two passengers in the auto driven by Iscome were treated at Casualty Hospital for minor head injuries but were later released.

Three soldiers and a sailor all attached to Solomons Island (Md.) base were hurt, as was a Washington railroad worker, last night in a collision between the latter's auto and an Army command car on the Marlboro Pike between Forrestville and District Heights.

Treated at Casualty Hospital were: Pvt. Robert Lovings, 31, driver of the Army car; Pfc. John Andrews, 23; Pvt. Joseph Azure, 25; Seaman Walter B. Kagelmacher, 18, and William L. Poole, 230 33d st. se.

Azure suffered a possible broken neck and Poole is thought to have received a possible skull fracture. The others escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

Meanwhile, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer has asked that District residents pledge themselves to safer driving and walking. Citing the recent large number of traffic fatalities, he said: "Washington's chances of ending the year high up among safe cities of its class are fading fast. Every user of our streets must awaken to his or her individual responsibilities in preventing these needless tragedies. Every accident, no matter how minor in nature, retards the war effort just that much more."

Washington has been listed second for safety in its class by the National Safety Council of Chicago for the fifth consecutive month with a traffic death rate of 3.2 per 10,000 registered vehicles and 816 per 100,000 population.

Wanted by Fleischmann!
Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

• This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey . . . who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands—and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¼ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream—to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1½ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED BLENDED WHISKEY
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof.

Crowley Expected to Define New FEA Functions This Week

By Walter Wood

Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley is expected before the week's end to issue a series of administrative orders making known the functions of the newly organized FEA divisions.

A blueprint of the new set-up prepared by the Bureau of the Budget calls for establishment of three new branches under the Bureau of Supplies and a Pan American Branch under the Bureau of Areas, it was learned yesterday.

The Supply branches, according to tentative plans, will be Engineering Service, Trade Relations Staff and Statistics and Report Service.

Chiefs of the branches are expected to be named by Crowley from the FEA staff and not from outside, it was said.

Three other positions awaiting to be filled are assistant admnistrator in charge of personnel; and two assistant directors, one in charge of the requirements and supply branch and the other in charge of the commodities services branch, both in the Bureau of Supplies.

Crowley's orders also will list the sections transferred to FEA from the old Office of Economic Warfare, the Lend-Lease Administration, the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation and the Office of Foreign Economic Coordination.

In the merger of agencies, designed to eliminate duplication and clear the lines of authority, the FEA will take over from OEW most of the office of exports, the entire enemy branch and the blockade and reoccupation divisions, according to Budget Bureau plans.

Transferred from Lend-Lease and coordinated within FEA in the blueprint are the divisions of requirements control, procurement control and material redistribution, and transportation and storage.

Scores of other sections from the old outfits will be absorbed. Others will be discarded.

Principal operating offices under which they will be organized are the Bureau of Supplies and the Bureau of Areas. The latter are charged with development, procurement, transportation and distribution of supplies of all kinds coming under the purview of economic warfare, lend-lease and foreign relief and rehabilitation.

The Office of Economic Programs, the planning branch of FEA, will include the war trade staff of OEW, and parts of the planning and development staff of the Lend-Lease Administration, according to tentative plans.

Some other administrative and planning branches of the old agencies also will be allied with the OEP and the office of Administrator Crowley.

Meanwhile, it was announced that Col. D. C. McDonald had been designated liaison officer between the FEA and the War Department.

DOCTORS WARN CONSTIPATED FOLKS ABOUT LAZY LIVER

Constipation is often accompanied by many discomforts—headaches, lack of energy and mental dullness being but a few. And here's good advice!

For years a noted Ohio Doctor, Dr. F. M. Edwards, successfully relieved scores of patients from constipation with his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now sold by druggists from coast to coast.

Olive Tablets, being purely vegetable, are wonderful! They not only gently yet thoroughly cleanse the bowels but ALSO stir up liver bile flow. Test their goodness TONIGHT to feel "tip-top" in the morning. 15¢, 30¢, 60¢. Follow label directions.

3 Powers Seen In Accord on Boundaries

By E. C. Daniel

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—Indications of a unanimity of British, American and Russian views on settlement of Europe's postwar boundaries were apparent here today as rumors were widespread that President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin would meet soon on neutral ground. The rumors were without official confirmation.

A proposal by the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia for a transition period to give small nations time to determine their own futures found agreement in the British policy of leaving the map of Europe alone until well after victory.

Stated by Hull

(Secretary of State Hull also declared in Washington that boundary settlements would be left until after the war.)

The possibility that this attitude may be put into any tri-power declaration by Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin is not overlooked in London.

In addition to fixing a positive date for a 1944 invasion of Northwest Europe in coordination with Russian campaigns, the three leaders are expected to solidify further a tri-power formula for dealing with the small Allies as well as enemies after the war.

In this connection the disposition in London apparently is to softpedal any postwar confederation of small states, which Russia, as Izvestia remarked in Moscow today, might interpret as an attempt to erect a cordon sanitaire against the Soviet Union.

"Liberate Them First"

Although British Foreign Secretary Eden in the past has given British indorsement to Czech-Polish and Yugoslav-Greek agreements for postwar economic and military collaboration, Britain is not inclined to support these movements in opposition to Russia.

It may be assumed the British have no intention of imperiling the paramount military alliance with Russia by a fruitless argument over secondary nonurgent issues like the future borders of Poland or the status of the Baltic states. "Liberate them first," is the Allied motto.

London newspapers modestly displayed dispatches from the United States today forecasting a meeting of Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin, but they printed nothing on their own initiative.

Liquidation of 21 Banks Laid Largely to FSA Competition

By the Associated Press

Competition from farm production credit associations financed by Government capital played a large part in the liquidation within the past two years of 21 Nebraska banks, a House Agriculture subcommittee was told yesterday.

Wade R. Martin, Nebraska director of banking and former operator of a country bank in that State, said "unless the present trend is checked and checked quickly, the country bank will be eliminated from our banking system.

"Small business as distinguished from agriculture will have lost its only source of credit and there can be only one answer—either a system of socialized credit or a subsidy for every type of business activity," he said.

The committee is inquiring into the farm credit structure of the Nation as part of its study of operations of the Farm Security Administration, created to aid low income farmers.

Martin's assertion that the PCA average interest rate actually might very often reach 8 per cent and exceed private bank rates was challenged by Representative Hope (Republican) of Kansas.

"Subject the PCAS to the same taxation, local, State and Federal, as banks must meet," Martin declared "and there is little question but that the operating income of 98 per cent of the PCAS would not cover operating expenses."

"Why are the banks concerned so much at this time about this particular problem?" asked Representative Pace (Democrat) of Georgia.

"We believe the time has come to take the Government subsidy away from the PCAS or let them pay interest on the money," Martin answered.

"Aren't you also interested in the idle capital now in the banks that you like to employ?" Pace continued.

"I think that's true," Martin said.

The Government, he said, should supplement private enterprise in times of national emergency "when our entire economy has broken down and withdraw when that emergency has passed."

Average Price For Oranges 9½c Per Lb.

Retail ceilings for the citrus fruits now coming to market will be reduced 10 to 15 per cent compared with prices in the 1942-43 season, Price Administrator Chester Bowles announced yesterday.

The new program will allow growers a somewhat higher return than last season.

The national average retail ceiling for oranges will be 9.5 cents a pound, or 1.5 a pound less than last season, OPA said. For grapefruit 8 cents a pound will be the national average and for lemons 13.5. This is a reduction of one cent for grapefruit and 1.5 cents for lemons.

The ceilings, to be set forth in a forthcoming regulation, will provide the following maximum returns per box to the grower for fruit on the tree.

Florida and Texas oranges $2.41 new ceiling and $2.13 last year's ceiling; California and Arizona oranges $2.85 and $2.63; Florida and Texas grapefruit $1.64 and $1.54; California and Arizona grapefruit $1.95 and $1.67; all lemons $3.28 and $3.03.

Under the new regulation, the maximum mark-up for wholesalers will be set in terms of dollars and cents a box, replacing the method used last season under which the maximum mark-up was fixed as a percentage over cost. This will prevent pyramiding of margins, OPA said, and at the same time new margins will be held more nearly in line.

Going ahead with its subsidy plans, the Office of Economic Stabilization, meantime, officially announced a program "to enable wheat flour millers to pay as high as parity prices for wheat, should the market reach that level, and at the same time continue to sell flour for no more than the ceiling prices now in effect."

This subsidy cost, it said, will be "less than one-half a cent per loaf whereas any increase in the price of bread must be at least a cent a loaf."

"Without the subsidy, family flour would advance about 55 cents per hundredweight," it was declared.

New Dates Listed For Brown Stamps

The dates five more sets of brown stamps in Ration Book 3 will become valid for meats-fats purchases were announced yesterday by the Office of Price Administration as follows:

Stamp Q will be good December 19, R December 26, S January 2, T January 9, and U January 16. Stamp Q expires January 1, the others January 29.

tilities would call for cancellation of more than one million of prime and subcontracts, the report added, criticizing the "hit-and-miss" manner in which contracts now are being voided and surplus material disposed of.

$43,184,800,000 in Prospect

From the Treasury, meanwhile, came acknowledgment that its estimate of $38,500,000,000 as the yield from existing tax law in 1944 had been revised upward to $41,137,000,000. Adding the tax bill, as reported by the House Ways and Means Committee, the prospective grand total should be $43,184,800,000, the Treasury said.

"With the American Army really on the march," Representative Snyder told the House, "we are going to capitalize now on the war situation greatly altered from that obtaining but a few months ago."

As the result the subcommittee's questioning of War Department officials, Mr. Snyder said that $2,200,000,000 could be added to the $10,943,319,449 Army "reserve" which, officers told Congress last spring, "probably would be obligated in full by June 30, 1944." Now it seems, he explained, that amount will not be obligated and contributing "factors" have arisen to question the need for $2,200,000,000 additional.

Those factors were listed by Mr. Snyder as follows:

1. Reduction of 548,000 men in the military strength of 8,200,000 appropriated for last spring—a reduction "determined by the War Department high command by reason of subsequent war developments" amounting to $1,945,039,000.

2. Curtailment of armament and equipment programs, $8,262,759,000.

3. Reduction in facilities, including maintenance, $780,447,000.

4. Modification and possible permanent deferment of a portion of the airplane program, $2,086,069,000.

5. Miscellaneous projects $88,205,000.

"Unless some unforeseen situation arises," Mr. Snyder said, "all of the thirteen billion-plus will revert to the Treasury on next July 1 and our ultimate debt will be diminished by that amount, which is equivalent approximately to 35 per cent of the estimated Treasury receipts from all sources during the current fiscal year.

"Putting the money in the Budget Bureau reserve removes it from control of the agency to which it was appropriated. The War Department has not been coerced into giving up the money but took the initiative in the proposal."

Two Authorities In D. C. Oppose Pinboy Hour Bill

President John Russell Young of the Board of Commissioners yesterday informed Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee that the Board of Education is opposed to a bill regulating hours of work for children employed in bowling alleys.

The measure would provide that for the duration of the war plus six months, boys between 16 and 18 may serve as pinboys until midnight and that boys between 14 and 16 may be employed until 11 p. m.

Young's letter said: "The Board of Education is of the opinion that to extend these hours would affect the health of the boys involved and would interfere with the successful performance of their school work.

Hull Sees Need for Alliances Ended

Russians—"a people who will fight against ruthless aggression, in utter contempt of death."

Legislators liked, tooo, Hull's reference to the nearing day when Germany and her remaining satellites "will have to go the way of Fascist Italy." They cheered his citation of freedom of religion, speech, press and assembly, and the right of people ultimately to choose their own government, as "among the most basic rights in civilized society." They applauded his promise of "due punishment" to Axis leaders for their crimes.

It was Speaker Rayburn in opening the session who recalled that it was here in the House chamber that Hull "started a career that has led to world-wide" fame. Scattered through the chamber were some who had fought with and against him in those early battles for tax and tariff reform, more who had supported his futile attempt through reciprocal trade agreements to head off the war. Only recently, an overwhelming majority of all present had helped implement his Moscow four nation policy by adopting the Fullbright and Connally resolutions.

To these, Hull paid this tribute: "As an American, I am proud of the breadth and height of vision and statesmanship which have moved you to adopt . . . by overwhelming, bipartisan majorities, resolutions in favor of our country's participation with other sovereign nations in an effective system of international cooperation for the maintenance of peace and security."

The 72-year-old Secretary, who flew half around the world to cap his career with the epochal agreement, underlined the four-power call for early creation of a general international organization,

Sovereign Equality

The principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a future system of general security, he told Congress, "will be the foundation stone" upon which the postwar association of nations is reared.

Through their joint declaration, Hull said the Soviet Union, Great Britain, the United States and China have thus laid the basis for all peace-loving nations, large and small, to live in peace and security, to preserve the liberties and rights of civilized existence, and to enjoy expanded opportunities and facilities for economic, social and spiritual progress.

He said no other important nations anywhere have more in common in the present war and in the peace. Inferentially he hit at an Anglo-American alliance by adding: "no one, no two of them can be most effective without the others in war or in peace."

The most significant line in his speech disclaimed the need for future power alliances. As the fournation agreement takes effect, he said there will be no more necessity for special arrangements "through which in the unhappy past, the nations strove to safeguard their security or to promote their interests."

This passage strangely went unapplauded.

The pact, itself, he referred to as "a brotherhood of self-preservation." Some of his friends in Congress remarked there could be no doubt the Secretary wrote his own speech, since it was replete with many typically Hull expressions, guarded statements, and some downright understatements. One such: "The Moscow Conference is believed to have been an important step in the direction both of shortening the war and of making provision for the future."

Faymonville Affair Touched by Hull

Clarence Edward Olsen of Waukegan, Ill., and Washington. Admiral Olsen, Navy Department sources said, will be the Navy's chief representative on General Deane's military mission, and he also will take over the post of naval attache.

Reports from Moscow, passed by the censor, have stated that Admiral Standley had complained in the past of lack of cooperation between lend-lease and other American agencies in the Russian capital and that the new mission under General Deane was assigned to work as a unit under Mr. Harriman to end a situation whereby some officers at the embassy were not even speaking to each other.

There are unofficial reports in Washington that Colonel Faymonville was not able to obtain promptly for the United States Government the information it desired on the Soviet military position. Further, it is reported, there had been friction between Colonel Faymonville and Colonel Michela.

Ulysses Grant-Smith, who was American Minister to Uruguay from 1925 to 1929 and is a retired veteran of the diplomatic service, said yesterday he had heard that Admiral Standley was unable to obtain required information from American officers in Moscow.

Grant-Smith expressed the opinion, based on his diplomatc career, that traditionally there has been rivalry between American Army and Navy officers assigned to foreign posts and that in some cases the heads of American diplomatic missions have found the military men on their staffs disinclined to transmit messages to the War and Navy Departments through normal diplomatic channels.

Two highly placed Army officers in Washington, who were familiar with Colonel Faymonville's work in Moscow, agreed yesterday that he is "a very superior officer in every way and always has done a very ne job wherever he has been."

One of the officers added, "I'm all for him. He's a very capable man."

Those who sought to penetrate the War Department's policy of silence about the affair recalled also that Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador at Moscow, in his book, "Mission to Moscow," described Colonel Faymonville, then military attache, as "a very careful and able man."

Albert Rhys Williams, in his book, "The Russians," called Colonel Faymonville "The American best versed in Soviet military affairs."

Argentina Bans Time Magazine From the Mails

Buenos Aires, Nov. 18 (AP).—Time Magazine and approximately 400 other publications have been banned from the mails in Argentina, the Argentine postoffice department announced today. The department offered no explanation.

Articles on Argentina to which President Gen. Pedro Ramirez's government apparently objected were contained in three recent issues of the English-language magazine printed here. The government failed to grant permission for the publication of Time's last four issues.

(P. I. Prentice, publisher of Time, said, in a statement issued in New York, that Time would suspend printing in Buenos Aires and added that the magazine hoped to begin publishing within a few weeks in Sao Paulo, Brazil, "where the more liberal government of President Getulio Vargas has indicated its friendly interest in having Time's air express edition printed.")

War on Spain Held Possibility

London, Nov. 18 (INS).—The Turkish radio predicted tonight that at a forthcoming meeting of Premier Joseph Stalin, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill "there is a possibility that a declaration of war will be made against the Franco regime."

Congress, Gallery Repeat Prayer in Unison First Time

The joint session of Congress yesterday was the first time that legislators and gallery visitors have joined a chaplain in repeating the Lord's Prayer, according to Dr. James Shera Montgomery, House chaplain.

Chaplain Montgomery told The Post that Speaker Sam Rayburn "thanked me heartily" afterward for suggesting that all repeat the prayer, and that Representative Noah M. Mason of Illinois came up to him and expressed the wish that "it would be done more often."

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris earlier had led the Senate in its prayers, and when the Senators came over to the House for the joint session, Chaplain Montgomery made the suggestion about the Lord's Prayer.

Treasury Indorses Liquor Investigation

Justice Department Meanwhile Presses Its Own Probe of Shortages

By the Associated Press

Congressional efforts to do something about the retail liquor shortage won the approval of the Treasury yesterday, and the Justice Department disclosed it already was pushing an investigation to see whether the scarcity is genuine.

While Senator Scrugham (Democrat) of Nevada, author of the resolution for the Senate inquiry which is to begin next week, estimated there are 400 million gallons of liquor stored in bonded warehouses—that's 3,200,000,000 pints—there were these other developments:

1. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau told of the plan of Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia to cut the length of time liquor may be held untaxed in bond, said:

"Senator George has a good idea and I'm for it." Morgenthau predicted that this plan to cut the nontaxable period from eight to four years would turn enough liquor into retail stores to end the shortage overnight and wipe out "the black market in liquor" just as promptly.

2. Wendell Berge, in charge of the Justice Department's anti-trust committee, disclosed that his office already has assigned special men to find out whether liquor concerns have been fixing prices and withholding supplies in order to create an artificial shortage and thus increase prices.

President Owsley Brown of the Distilled Spirits Institute has said: "We are hopeful that the real truth about the dwindling whisky stocks now in Government bonded warehouses will be revealed by the Senate inquiry and that confusing impressions may be eradicated."

Thus all hands agreed there is a shortage; the difference of opinion is on whether it is a real one, due to the conversion of distilleries to the manufacture of industrial alcohol for war, or whether it has been artificially created for the purpose of profit.

Berge told newsmen that the Justice Department inquiry so far indicates that it has "a fertile field." He expressed "full sympathy" for the Senate investigation and said his staff would follow it for any evidence of monopoly or restraint of trade.

Berge listed these particular angles:

Whether there has been a deliberate monopolization of existing supplies, distilling facilities, imports or channels of distribution; and any price-fixing activities such as withholding of supplies, use of new brand names to evade price ceilings and reduction of alcoholic content in consumer offerings.

Nesbitt, Wealthy Turfman, Dies After Night Club Fight

St. Louis, Nov. 18 (AP).—Hugh S. Nesbitt, 46, wealthy California manufacturer and sportsman owner of the race horse, Staretor, died today in a hospital several hours after engaging in an altercation with another man in a downtown hotel lobby.

An autopsy showed death was caused by a brain hemorrhage which resulted from a fracture of the skull.

A man is being held by police in connection with Nesbitt's death, but no charges have been filed.

Police headquarters said hotel employes related that Nesbitt, who resided in Beverly Hills, got into a fight in the hotel night club, and the fisticuffs continued a short time later in the lobby.

The Californian was knocked to the floor, striking his head. He was unconscious when taken to the hospital and Dr. George Rendleman said he died without regaining consciousness.

Hotel employes said the altercation started when Nesbit picked up a drink from another couple's table. Waiters ejected him from the room but the fight began again in the lobby.

Nesbitt's horse, Staretor, finished second to Whirlaway in the 1941 Kentucky Derby and won the Hollywood Derby the same year. He also owned Copperman.

Nesbitt was vice president and sales manager of the Goebel Brewing Co. in Detroit from 1933 to 1938, before going to California where he founded and headed the Nesbitt Fruit Products Co.

He came to St. Louis Sunday to attend the convention of the American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages.

East's Fuel Oil Supply Sufficient Now, Ickes Says

Petroleum Administrator for War Harold L. Ickes yesterday announced that the approach of winter finds the East Coast region supplied with enough heating oil to satisfy current rationed civilian demands and said the "Big Inch" pipeline was rapidly approaching capacity flow.

Stocks, Ickes said, are still less than 60 per cent of normal, but movement of more than 400,000 barrels of oil daily by pipeline is helping to maintain supplies close to programmed levels.

At his press conference yesterday, Ickes denied reports that he was interested in an international pool or cartel to divide up the world's petroleum.

He announced that Dr. E. DeGolyer, petroleum geologist of Houston, Tex., will head the Petroleum Reserves Corporation's mission to the Middle East.

Hard Luck Goes With Soldier On Week's Leave

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 18 (AP). Pfc. Lewis Vik of Henning, Minn., looked forward to a week's furlough from Fort Bliss, Tex. But this is what happened:

His train was snowbound five days at Sanborn, Minn.

When the drifts were cleared and he resumed his journey his train collided with another and there was additional delay.

He lost his ticket and had to buy another.

Once home he wired the camp for an extension of furlough, but no answer came and he started back.

Five hours after he began the return journey a telegram came granting the extension.

Walking Arsenal Given 18 Months, Minus Weapons

Judge Walter J. Casey in Municipal Court said, "You are the most thoroughly armed man I ever saw," yesterday as he sentenced Gentlo Ramson, 34, Negro, to serve 18 months in jail for three violations of the Dangerous Weapons Act.

Ramson, a caretaker on Jefferson Ford's estate in Groveton, Va., last Wednesday came into Washington with a revolver, switchblade knife, four bottles of brandy and a home-made bomb powered with half a stick of dynamite.

Judge Casey on Armistic Day refused to allow the bomb to remain in court and sent it to the Police Department for testing. When exploded the bomb shattered several boards.

Court Orders $150,000 Paid To Plant Child

New London, Conn., Nov. 18 (AP). Superior Court Judge James Murphy approved late today an out-of-court settlement in the Peter Bennett Plant parentage case providing for payment of $150,000, minus $27,000 in counsel fees, to the 14-year-old son of Film Actress Constance Bennett.

The approval came after a day of conferences among rival attorneys concerned with Miss Bennett's appeal from a Groton Probate Court ruling that Peter was an adopted child and not her son by her marriage to the late Broadway playboy, Phil Plant.

The question of the boy's parentage, however, was not mentioned in the settlement. The $150,000 will come from a $650,000 trust fund established by the late Commodore Morton Plant, steamship magnate, for his stepson, Phil Plant. The latter's will directed that if he died without issue the trust fund go to Mrs. Mae Manwaring Hayward of New York, his mother.

Miss Bennett says Peter is her son by her marriage to Plant, stepson of the commodore from whom she was divorced in 1929. The estates of Morton and Philip Plant contended in court Tuesday that the boy was born, out of wedlock, in January, 1929, to one Sabina Armstrong in England and was adopted by the actress a short time later.

Conferences leading to the settlement began Wednesday afternoon and reliable sources said the figures were agreed upon last night, but that discussion of the parentage angle kept the rival attorneys in a huddle throughout most of the day.

Lawyers said the order approved by Judge Murphy now will be taken to the Groton Probate Court for modification of the original decree which said Peter was entitled to no part of the trust fund.

Such other modifications as the attorneys may agree upon also will be made, and it was understood that one such modification might be deletion from the decree of the finding that Philip Plant died without issue.

Miss Bennett came to the courthouse late today and after Judge Murphy approved the settlement, she came forward to the bench and said, "Thank you so much for being so patient."

De Marigny Waits Sentence On Gas Charge

By James L. Kilgallen

Nassau, Nov. 18 (INS).—Count Alfred de Marigny and his intimate friend, Marquis Georges de Visdelou, were convicted today of illegal possession of RAF gasoline and violating the Bahamas' gas rationing system.

De Marigny, who just a week ago tonight was found not guilty of bludgeoning and burning to death his multi-millionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, and De Visdelou will be sentenced tomorrow.

Both men were taken to the police station until the posting of 100 pounds ($400) bail for each. The count's bail finally was put up by Oswald Moseley, a Nassau insurance man, while De Visdelou's was arranged by Bruce Thompson, local liquor dealer.

Nancy Oakes de Marigny, wife of De Marigny, was visibly depressed at the court's findnigs.

Shortly after the court had found the two French noblemen guilty, pretty 16-year-old Betty Roberts, blonde friend of De Visdelou, expressed fear that he would be jailed when sentenced tomorrow, but said she planned to marry him anyway.

The ceremony will take place when she is 17, she said—by proxy if necessary. De Visdelou, like De Marigny, has been asked to leave the Bahamas by British authorities.

De Marigny gulped and De Visdelou bowed his head when Magistrate Field announced both had been found guilty on two counts, illegal possession of RAF gasoline and violation of the Bahamas' gas rationing law.

The magistrate, asserting the RAF gasoline charge was the more serious, said he wanted time to consider the sentence.

De Marigny, taking the stand, claimed he had no knowledge that it was "hot gas" that was being stored on his premises. It was, he declared strictly a De Visdelou transaction. De Visdelou, who pleaded guilty, did not take the stand.

McGranery Takes Oath

James P. McGranery, a Philadelphia attorney, was sworn in yesterday by Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court, as an assistant to Attorney General Francis Biddle in the latter's office here, it was announced by the Department of Justice.

McGranery succeeds James H. Rowe, jr., who recently resigned to accept a Navy commission. He is a former member of the House of Representatives serving as a member of the Philadelphia delegation from 1936 to 1942.

Shooting Suspect Wounds 2, Is Slain

Aiken, S. C., Nov. 18 (AP).—Barricading his home to officers who sought to investigate a shooting there, J. L. Quimby, jr., 50, of Graniteville, about 5 miles from here, shot and wounded two officers today before he was finally killed by a bullet from a rifle in the hands of a State constable.

Quimby had stood off officers for several hours while his wife lay critically wounded on the floor. She was taken to a hospital here shortly after officers effected entrance to the house.

The wounded men, Sheriff James P. Howard of Aiken County and State Constable W. J. Thompson, were not seriously hurt.

Convict Suggests Crime Curbs

Austin, Minn., Nov. 18 (AP).—A convict, reading in prison of a wave of juvenile crime here, has written Sheriff Arnold Eckhardt his suggestions for correcting it, and Eckhardt said today he thought the man's idea was so good he was acting on them immediately.

The convict is George S. Skaggs, 32, who was sent to the Minnesota prison from this meat-packing center last September for forgery. However, he explained, his troubles really began when he was sentenced to a Federal reformatory at the age of 17 for car theft.

Skaggs, telling the sheriff he wanted to show "the kids . . . what a waste" criminal mistakes can make of their lives, told how he had read of nearly a dozen boys recently involved here in crimes bringing training school or reformatory sentences.

"If the kids could only understand what they are bringing upon themselves," he wrote. Then he proposed:

Plenty of publicity; visiting of jails by school classes; showing pictures of cell houses and penitentiaries, and "a little lecture on the true facts" of prison life—not to scare them but "show what a waste their life can become."

He said "the kids" should know what it is to be "buried alive" under a number—of the rough clothing, dull routine, idle time.

Irate Wife Burns Strip-Teaser

Hollywood, Nov. 18 (AP).—Stripper Betty Rowland, billed as "The Redheaded Ball of Fire," was really burning today and the reason, she says, was a lighted cigarette end which an irate wife applied to the dancers' shapely hip last night.

Her dance was interrupted by a loud yelp when she passed close to the table occupied by the woman and her husband. At the office of the city attorney, where Betty asked today for an assault and battery complaint, she declared the cigarette was applied deliberately. The city attorney promised to investigate.

Marian Anderson Reveals July Nuptials

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 18 (AP).—Marian Anderson, Negro contralto, announced here today her marriage last July to a childhood sweetheart, Orpheus Fisher, architectural engineer, in Bethel, Conn. Bethel Town Clerk Leonard L. Bailey reported the date as July 24.

"We met while we still were in school in Philadelphia," the singer said. "He wanted me to elope even then."

Fisher is employed at a war plant in Danbury, Conn., where the couple plans to live when Miss Anderson is not on tour.

Who wants to date a "SLEEP-WALKER"?

That was me, all right! . . . So tired and rundown that I used to fall asleep standing up! Everything I did was an effort. No pep—no endurance—no appetite! And nervous as a cat!

Then my doctor told me what was wrong! . . . "Nutritional anemia," he called it, "brought on by a shortage of iron in the blood. For a condition like that," he said, "I recommend a good iron tonic like Gude's Pepto-Mangan!"

Pepto-Mangan helps make the blood redder and richer in iron. Many doctors prescribe Pepto-Mangan for pale, weak, rundown men, women and children who need more iron to build them up and to help them get back their strength, appetite and pep.

Pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists with a money-back guarantee of satisfaction! Ask for the original and only Gude's Pepto-Mangan!

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

If You Suffer Distress From Monthly FEMALE WEAKNESS With its Cranky, Nervous Feelings

If at such times you suffer from cramps, backache, nervous, tired feelings, are a bit blue—due to functional monthly disturbances—

Start at once—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve such symptoms. It's famous not only to help relieve monthly pain but also accompanying tired, nervous feelings of this nature. This is because of its soothing effect on ONE OF WOMAN'S MOST IMPORTANT ORGANS.

Taken regularly—Pinkham's Compound helps build up resistance against such symptoms. Follow label directions!

Inadmissible Confession

In the District Court yesterday still another confession by yet another defendant in a criminal case was ruled out of evidence under a strict and literal application by the judge of the Supreme Court ruling in the now celebrated case of the McNabbs. In this latest instance the prisoner, one Monroe Neely, a Negro, is charged with the murder of a policeman. A confession appears to have been obtained from him by the police between the time of his arrest on the evening of Saturday, May 9, and the morning of Monday, May 11, when Neely was taken before a coroner for hearing. This delay, the judge decided, constituted a "disregard of fair procedures imposed by law" as interpreted in Justice Frankfurter's ruling in the McNabb case. The trial, however, was permitted to proceed on the basis of other evidence than the confession.

This, then, appears to be the third time within scarcely more than a week that the McNabb decision has disturbed what might be considered the normal operation of criminal justice in the District of Columbia. Last week on the basis of that decision the Court of Appeals nullified the verdict in the case of one James P. Mitchell, who had been convicted of housebreaking and larceny. Last Monday in the District Court a judge directed a verdict of "not guilty" in the case of a youth accused of an attempt at rape, meanwhile making the extraordinary observation that it probably meant "a miscarriage of justice."

Thus it seems that the McNabb decision has for the moment opened a sort of gold mine for criminal lawyers. It would make an appeal practical and profitable in almost any case in which a confession has been involved and in which there has been any delay in the arraignment of the prisoner after his arrest. At the same time the proximity of these three cases may lead a layman not too familiar with the processes of judicial psychology to wonder whether the local judges may be attempting a sort of reductio ad absurdum of the McNabb decision. If so, they have pretty well succeeded.

Counterattack

It is not clear how much ground the Red army has been forced to give up in the Zhitomir-Korostyshev sector as a result of what was evidently a stiff German counterattack. The general impression gained by correspondents in Moscow is that the Russian withdrawal was not on a large scale. They say that it was primarily a tactical maneuver to prevent the encirclement of a small advance guard. Be that as it may, the fact that the Germans still have the strength to launch a successful counterattack definitely does suggest that they are by no means at the end of their rope on the Eastern Front.

Taken together with what has been happening at Leros and the stubborn fight the Germans have been making in Italy, the German counterattack at Zhitomir will come as a sobering warning. Of late, to be sure, Germany has suffered some extremely heavy blows. The war is being brought home to her people on an ever-rising scale. She has undoubtedly lost the chance she once had of winning the war. But the important fact to remember is not only that she is still fighting on but that she still possesses the power to strike back.

Without Complaint?

The Southwest Pacific is one of a number of important theaters in this war. A magnificent job has been done there by the Australian and American troops under the command of General MacArthur. Undoubtedly they will do an even greater job when it becomes possible to give them more equipment. Meanwhile, according to a Col. L. A. Diller, identified as a spokesman for General MacArthur, "Without complaint, the area is doing everything it can with what it has."

Without complaint? Colonel Diller also took the trouble to observe that the Southwest Pacific has "something less than 5 per cent of American military resources and is now receiving less than 10 per cent of what America is shipping overseas." The colonel prefaced this interesting observation by saying, "I'm reluctant to discuss the subject." His reluctance can be readily understood. But it is less easy to understand why he saw fit to overcome it. If it was not for the purpose of registering a complaint, then it served no purpose whatsoever.

We all wish that we could make available to General MacArthur weapons and supplies without limit. But we know that there are other war theaters which must be equipped, too—if necessary, in preference to the Southwest Pacific. For the grand strategy upon which we and our Allies have determined is to defeat Hitler first. We are well on the way toward that objective—in fact, on the home stretch. When it has been achieved, there will be no dearth of arms for MacArthur.

Forward From Moscow

In liberal measure Secretary Hull got the plaudits of his fellows when he mounted the rostrum in the House of Representatives yesterday and told the assembled Congress of his accomplishment in Moscow. He deserved them. But he added nothing new to the expositions which he had already given to the newspaper correspondents. What was refreshing was the revelation that the Secretary was not content with his distinguished achievement. That to him was only a beginning. Both in manner and in subject matter Secretary Hull gave the impression that the "forward move" he had helped to launch would lack nothing of his powers in the progress to comprehensive agreement. There was a zest in the way Mr. Hull pledged himself to the development of his diplomacy. It was as if he had renewed both his body and his spirit in the companionship in Moscow. Clearly Mr. Hull intends to build well and truly on the foundation of world order which he helped to lay in the Russian capital.

It was a happy thought which prompted Secretary Hull to pitch his exposition on this note of the preliminary nature of the Moscow undertaking. Many Americans were so relieved by the Moscow declaration that they hailed as a new day what was in reality only the dawn. This was understandable enough. Before Mr. Hull went to Moscow, the air had been thick with suspicion and cynicism. The rumormongers, unconsciously playing Goebbels' last card, harped on Russian separatism. The Russians intended to deal separately with the Germans. They were determined to get to Berlin first. They would never agree to entrust their security to a common policy with the rest of the anti-Hitler coalition. They were planning to make a separate peace with Germany. The dissipation of this miasma of doubt and distrust was enough to make the peoples of the United Nations feel that there was more performance than promise in the Moscow success. But much more remains to be done to realize that freedom from fear which Speaker Rayburn described as the "inarticulate longing" of mankind. And it can be done if we adhere to the wisdom which animated Mr. Hull and his fellow foreign ministers in the Russian capital—the wisdom, that is, which flows from attention to realities.

It was this approach which persuaded the plenipotentiaries to postpone the settlement of the "30 or 40" boundary questions. We feel that the postponement was amply justified. It would have been folly to take time out from waging the war to settle these thorny problems. If Hitler would have waited, well and good, but, of course, he would not have waited. And if we had given him that advantage, we should have been guilty of betraying our own kith and kin at their battle stations. The mere act of postponing these problems gave our soldiers the greatest fillip and our arms the greatest impetus since the conquest of North Africa. For the mere act of postponing these problems was enough to cement the "brotherhood of self-preservation," as Secretary Hull called the evolution of the grand coalition. And in turn that compact struck out of Goebbels' hand the last card of Allied disunity with which he hoped to encompass our defeat. Now we can apply force integrated and without stint to speed the day when the shoulders of humanity will be relieved of the evil curse and dread threat of Hitlerism.

To postpone the frontier settlements, however, is not to resign them to individual demarcation. It was decided in Moscow to work together in peace as in war in the remapping of the new world in the spirit of the Atlantic Charter. Secretary Hull, with the same kind of wisdom about the problems of peace as he applied to those of war, said the need to stick together would remain equally compelling when the shooting is over. He is altogether right. Only if the four powers continue their present collaboration will humanity be assured of even a breathing spell. But that means that our Government cannot expect to dictate exactly the form of the frontier settlements. All we can do is to bring to the new policy of four-power collaboration the steady pressure of moral and diplomatic force in the realization of the Atlantic Charter. It is enough at present that the Allies have developed the faith and forbearance and understanding to enable them to take counsel together in confidence and with a determination to agree.

Court Test

Three men are now working for the Federal Government despite a congressional injunction against the payment of their salaries. These men, Messrs. Watson, Dodd and Lovett, were denounced by a House committee as "subversive" within a mystical definition of that term devised by the committee members. Subsequently the House as a whole attached a rider to an urgent deficiency appropriation bill proscribing the three individuals from all Federal employment after November 15. The Senate reluctantly acceded to the rider in order to get the appropriation measure enacted. The President, compelled to sign it in order to make funds available for vital war agencies, termed it "not only unwise and discriminatory, but unconstitutional."

In the light of this history there is every reason for satisfaction in the news that the questionable rider is to be tested in the courts. The Federal Communications Commission and the Department of the Interior where the three men are employed are to be congratulated for keeping them in their jobs. If these executive agencies had yielded to the congressional pressure, no recourse to the judiciary would have been possible. Now, it is understood, Messrs. Watson, Dodd and Lovett will bring suit together in the Court of Claims for recovery of the salaries due them.

There is a twofold issue. The Post has contended from the outset of this controversy that the action of the House was "in the nature of a bill of attainder" and a "gross usurpation of executive authority." It is to the courts that Americans traditionally repair for protection of their civil rights. And it is to the third branch of our Government, the judiciary, that the executive and legislative branches must go for determination of their respective spheres of authority. The values at stake are of the highest significance. It is well that they will be weighed at last in the detached impartiality of judicial chambers.

Critical Stage

The next few days may well decide the outcome of the battle that has been waged against inflation. The campaign has not been conducted as effectively as it might have been if Congress had been willing to put adequate weapons into the hands of the OPA. Nevertheless the consumer has been spared the sufferings that would have followed uncontrolled profiteering in basic necessities of life.

We know fairly well by now what are the requisites of an efficient system of price control. The hard task is that of execution. Courage of a high order is required to resist the pressure to relax the rules in favor of this or that group. Stabilization Director Vinson and Chester Bowles, head of OPA, have both shown much courage in trying to hold the line against these pressure groups. Furthermore, Mr. Bowles has carried out congressional instructions to entrust price policy-making to competent businessmen. He has also decentralized the OPA's enforcement system and is progressively simplifying OPA rules and regulations.

All these efforts will go for naught, however, if Congress continues to be a football of special interests and refuses to uphold the policies that these two officials believe to be essential to continued holding of the price line. The threatened legislative sabotage of the "Little Steel" formula and the overthrow of the subsidy system would have disastrous consequences not only because of their immediate effect on prices but because they would betray the vulnerability of Congress to political pressure from selfish groups. If ever statesmanship were required on the Hill, it is now.

Upsetting The Draft

For months Congress balked at the unpleasant obligation to put fathers into uniform. Now House and Senate conferees have arrived at a sort of pious compromise resolution to delay the induction of pre-Pearl Harbor parents as long as possible "without affecting the usual regular and orderly flow" of required manpower into the armed forces according to quota schedules, and the House has unanimously accepted it. What this boils down to is a protest against the inevitable. We have reached a stage in the mobilization of our manpower when continued deferment of fathers, solely on the ground of their paternity, cannot fail to affect the "orderly flow" of recruitment.

The congressional compromise is likely to have an even more serious effect upon the sound mobilization of manpower for war production. It divorces the operation of the Selective Service System from the War Manpower Commission, leaving Paul McNutt all but impotent. We have never cared much for Mr. McNutt's "work-or-fight" decrees. But in the absence of any national service law they have been the only means by which he could prod men out of nonessential occupations into jobs related to the war. Under the proposed regulations he could no longer maintain, for fathers at least, the list of nondeferrable occupations which he has established. To take away this authority without providing any substitute or alternative seems highly irresponsible.

What the House and Senate conferees propose, in effect, is to subordinate occupation to paternity as a basis for draft deferment. In the light of our over-all manpower needs this is a rather dangerous course to pursue. For the war is by no means yet won in Europe, let alone in the Orient. And it can be perilously prolonged by any faltering either on the production lines or in the creation of armed forces adequate to the plans which have been formulated by our military strategists. Speed is a factor in victory. The more swiftly and effectively we can mobilize the fullest measure of our potential strength, the more overwhelmingly we can bring it to bear upon our enemies. We need to remind ourselves that we cannot wage this war comfortably. We cannot win it with anything less than our utmost effort, especially on the home stretch.

WINTER COME

The stiffening trees in the afternoon,
The asters gone, a bird's defensive wing;
These at the year's end tell me certainly
Here ends what started in the green young spring.

Not at the blizzard hurdling the low fence rows,
Or flocks, but the ice crusted at the pool's edge;
Not the stricken year, but the tardy bird
Fatally locked at last in the frozen sedge

Are things that speak to me in surer tones
Than wisdom gathered in more careful ways.
I lay their tribute like a wall of stones
Against the winter's siege upon my days.

Confidence In Hull

By Mark Sullivan

An Immense Asset

MR. HULL went to Moscow. There, with Mr. Molotov of Russia and Mr. Eden of Britain, he negotiated an international agreement. He brought the agreement back to the United States. Promptly the agreement was ratified by the Senate—in a nonpartisan action and by an immense majority, 85 to 5. In further tribute to Mr. Hull, Congress paid him an extraordinary honor—invited him to address the body, listened to him with earnest deference and respect.

Congress has long respected Mr. Hull, has had confidence in his judgment. Men in Congress who are not of Mr. Hull's political party have on many occasions supported his policies. Even men who disagreed with his policies have sometimes subordinated their own opinions to Mr. Hull's—assuming, generously and wisely, that the official responsible for conducting our foreign relations should, within reasonable limits, have the support of the legislative branch of Government.

YET IN quarters outside Congress, as recently as last August, Mr. Hull was under attack. The attack, in some cases, had the purpose or the effect of an attempt to undermine Mr. Hull's standing and authority, and to discredit policies he was following. Some of the attack was of such a nature that Mr. Hull felt obliged to describe it publicly as "falsehood," and President Roosevelt, who stood by Mr. Hull, used a shorter and stronger word.

At that time, August 5th and after, this column said some things about Mr. Hull which are here repeated, for a special reason. After pointing out the immense, complex, and extremely controversial problems of foreign policy America must face, now and in the postwar period, this column said of Mr. Hull:

"The people cannot possibly know the details of these questions. They must be enabled to accept what is done on faith. This means faith in the officials who act for the United States. The officials on whom the country has faith become the symbols through which public affairs are carried on. The truth is, this is how democracy works. The individual citizen to a large degree takes his part in public affairs through thinking of public men as symbols . . . In the public life of the United States at this time, Secretary Hull is one of our most exalted symbols. Through more than 10 years as Secretary of State, and a lifetime before that in the Senate and House, Mr. Hull has become a symbol of qualities of wisdom and character and dependability, qualities that evoke from the people respect and even veneration, qualities that bring to a man, in a real sense, the status and authority of an elder statesman."

THIS IS repeated now because the conditions that evoked it three months ago still exist. Not that Mr. Hull any longer needs defense against attack—what he accomplished at Moscow has itself disproved what was said in attack upon him, and given him unique elevation in America and the world.

But it still remains true that in the management of our foreign relations, the American people are obliged to accept much that is done on faith. Right now, as an example, there is acute controversy within the United Nations about a little strip of territory on the Mediterranean called Lebanon. On this controversy the American Government must take a position—this is necessary for the unity of the United Nations, for the conduct of the war, and in view of postwar settlements that must be made. What this controversy is about, what would be the ramifying effects of decision one way or the other, not one American in ten thousand is equipped to know. Ask yourself, reader. We must let the decision be made by those who conduct our foreign relations.

There are scores of such issues—about boundaries, race, ideology. The whole task of postwar organization to preserve peace is made up of such issues.

Faced by these issues, the American people can take one of two positions. Either they can, in distaste for problems which are far away and which they do not understand, clamor for withdrawal from European matters—in effect isolation. But this, we have learned, does not work. The other course is to trust those who conduct our foreign relations. This is why the confidence of the people and of Congress in Secretary Hull is an immense asset to the country.

Feminine Patriotism

In a lonely spot far, far away in the South Pacific Islands one of our fair Washington lassies is doing a swell job in spreading good cheer and comfort among our men. She is a Red Cross worker who rises at 3 a.m. every morning to make hot coffee to fill the cold bellies of traveling fliers. Being a native son of the D. C., it was a pleasure to meet one of our unselfish girls who has a kind word and smile and good java for us boys so far from home.

Growing Pains

Problems Of Expansion

AS GERMANY and Japan looked at the America of 1941, they came to the conclusion that this country would not be able to play an effective combat role in the war which Germany had provoked in 1939 and which Japan was to join in 1941.

We can appreciate to the full, today, the reasoning behind this conclusion. It was conservative reasoning, based on extensive knowledge of what it takes to arm and train a country for total war. When Americans go to war, conservative reasoning goes overboard. We deal, as a Nation, in terms of miracles. We undertake to do the impossible.

On several occasions during our previous history we have gotten away with miracles. Thus we have adopted the viewpoint that warmaking and the performance of miracles are synonymous.

Military men don't like miracles. Many military men—of the land, sea and air forces—facing the tasks that lie ahead in 1944, are profoundly disturbed by the nature of the miracles everyone seems to expect the Nation to perform. They are tackling those miracles, tackling them cheerfully, but sometimes they wonder if the country realizes that bootstrap warmaking can be a desperately risky process.

IN 1941 we had just begun a limited draft of men for military service; we had also mobilized the National Guard; we also maintained our customary peacetime army. Our real mobilization, however, did not begin until after Pearl Harbor.

In December, 1941, we were so weak in air power that our losses at Pearl Harbor and in the Philippines, which would today be thought trivial, were an acute embarrassment.

As to naval strength, we possessed a great and powerful Navy on the day of Pearl Harbor—yet the German submarine attack on the Atlantic coast in the spring of 1942 found us gravely handicapped by lack of ships for the most rudimentary patrol and escort duties in the new combat area.

On December 7, 1943, we shall have been at war for two years.

During these two years, we have done quite a bit of combat.

We have not yet, however, used more than a small fraction of our combat strength. We have for the most part been able to pick and choose, selecting the fittest and best-prepared units for the fighting jobs.

On the whole, we have stood up very well in fast company.

Army, Navy, Air Forces—all can be proud of the record made in battle.

We are now, however, entering 1944—entering an altogether different phase of the war. The payoff phase. The period in which we start using the Army, the Air Force, the Navy we have created.

HITLER BEGAN the mobilization of Germany for war in 1933. Starting from scratch, he prepared his military establishment according to plan. He went to war in 1939, after six years of preparation. When he struck he was ready—millions of men had been brought to battle fitness.

Japanese preparation lasted longer still. The Japanese Army and Navy were on a war footing throughout virtually all of the thirties, and during that time fought numerous actions, some of them on a considerable scale. The "China Incident" can be seen today as nothing more nor less than a preliminary training-ground for what lay ahead.

Imagine the military establishment we should have, if we were allowed six years, beginning in 1941, for preparation! Suppose, during those years, we were able to give men battle seasoning, as the Germans did by sending units to Spain! Suppose our timetable date for all-out effort were 1947, not 1944! What an Army we should have! What a Navy! What an Air Force! No wonder the Germans looked good in 1939!

But we are working miracles, and 1944 is the date.

In 1944 our Army, Navy and Air Forces will be at the climax of a forced, unnatural expansion—an astonishing mushroom growth.

We shall have attained the size we set out to attain.

We must appreciate, however, that we have done this by asking men to achieve the impossible. The greatest strain of all is upon the men in command positions, the men who carry the responsibility, who do the doing—majors, colonels, brigadiers . . . commanders, captains, admirals. Our supply of such men, thin in 1941, has been stretched to the limits of expansion—

The Navy, for instance, faces a problem of operating more ships, in 1944, than anyone had dreamed remotely likely—for submarine losses have been low, and building rates high. Each ship must have a skipper, a chief engineer—men to go out onto the high seas into combat waters, to face stern reality.

Such expansion demands that men do more than they know how to do. We could well use 1944 as a training year—but it will be a fighting year. May the men who face it rise to the occasion.

Poll Tax

Your editorial, "Poll Tax," is a sneak attack upon democracy.

Your editorial blandly omits to state that for the six years anti-poll-tax legislation has been before Congress, The Post has been opposed to its passage. The fact is that each time a crucial stage in the fight for the legislation has been reached, The Post in editorials and in neatly timed columns by Mark Sullivan has cast its lot with those malign forces who disfranchise 10 million Americans and make a mockery of democracy by engaging in an undemocratic filibuster. The fact is The Post opposed anti-poll-tax legislation in peacetime just as stubbornly as it does in time of war.

But in the years that have passed, the moral indignation of the overwhelming majority of American people against the crime of denying 10 million Americans' the right to vote, against the use of the filibuster by a willful minority to thwart the will of the majority of the elected representatives of the people, has become so vocal that The Post and its fellow poll-taxers have been forced to shift ground.

Thus your editorial—with less than candor and intellectual honesty—after mildly slapping the wrists of the cabal of poll-tax Senators who are now plotting to give direct aid to Hitler by a shameless filibuster on the Senate floor, comes to the meat of its argument in the "Munich" proposal that since the poll-tax boys are going to be bad boys, it is best not to bring the issue to the Senate floor during the war; that those who do are guilty of a disservice to America.

The Post will not be able to get away with this distortion. To repeal the poll-tax laws is to release for fullest participation in our fight for victory and for a democratic peace the energies of 10 million voteless Americans, now hobbled by domestic fascism. There are Americans with enough democratic guts left to guarantee that Hitler fascism abroad and poll-tax fascism at home are beaten into unconditional surrender.

JOHN P. DAVIS.
Washington, Nov. 16.

If any Congressman has the effrontery to filibuster for the poll tax, he thereby reveals his abject terror for his position; he knows he would not be there if all the people who are morally eligible in his State could vote. We know that the fight for the poll tax is not for our benefit; we know that propaganda about race has proved only that the Southern whites and Negroes can trust each other even under that strain; we know that we need profoundly to have our vote in 1944—we do not want a poll-tax President! Peace Organization

Now that four leading world powers, the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China have agreed that a new world organization for international security should be established, and as the House and Senate of the United States have voted overwhelmingly to aid in bringing about such an organization at the earliest possible date, President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, Premier Josef Stalin and Gen. Chiang Kai-shek should immediately join in inviting representatives of all nations to meet without delay for the purpose of devising the best ways and means of bringing the present world war to an end and agreeing upon a date on which an international election may be held.

Free peoples everywhere demand the right to elect representatives of their own choosing and to not have set up for them a so-called "League of Nations" dominated by international gangsters whose hands are red and dripping with the blood of millions of men, women and children as was believed to have been the case in 1920. We want, and demand, a world government patterned after the government adopted by the United States of America which has proven to be just, and successful, for more than a century and a half.

WPB Orchestra

Before I get back into the routine of camp life, I want to send you this note about a Washington enterprise which impressed me very much while I was there.

I was attending administrative school for two months this fall at Fort Washington, and while in the Capital one Saturday evening I stumbled on the War Production Board Symphony.

Bigger and better orchestras have been heard, of course, and I wasn't surprised to notice a weakness or two in the horn section, and so on. But that's not the point. These men and women employes of the WPB, with their weekly practices and their enthusiasm for fine music, are doing an extraordinarily good job. They're presenting an interesting variety of music in an effective manner. And they are thereby contributing not only to their own musical education but to the musical edification of the city.

Washington's war agencies alone make up a good sized community This kind of artistic effort is an excellent example of the vitality of music in America "at the grass roots"—among amateurs, young professionals, and listeners.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Suggestion For A Thanksgiving Proclamation—1943

Whereas even a man looking through smoked glasses can see that this country owes more to Providence than any country on earth, and—

Whereas God's special dispensation is to be seen in our escape from disaster under sudden attack, our National unity and our fantastic transition from weakness to a strength that has amazed the world, and—

Whereas this is to be reflected in the transformation of its pleasure loving, peaceful youth into a resolute, fearless, hard-hitting, heroic fighting force; and in the transition of quiet hearth, peaceful farm, trinket-shop, luxury mill and jallopy factory into one roaring arsenal of democracy, and—

Whereas the soul of America has found itself, and its spirit felt a resurrection unequaled since Valley Forge and Concord Bridge, and—

Whereas the year 1943 has, by the Grace of God, shown increasing proof that we as a Nation have not grown too soft, too pigheaded, too fat, too selfish and too futile to be worthy of our heritage, and—

Whereas the whole Nation has seen a return to the altars of God and a surging back to the chapels on the templed hills and the cathedrals of the teeming cities, and—

Whereas the ringing of a church-bell, the sound of children in a choir loft, the flash of sunlight through a stained-glass dome, the tinkle of the communion chimes and the simple story of an American soldier furloughed by the Government, that he may embrace his dying dog, have come to stir our hearts as they once did, and—

Whereas the Gimme-Gimme spirit, while still apparent in spots, is surely being trampled under the National will to play four square with Destiny, and—

Whereas at last, we, as a pampered people accustomed to luxurious comforts have come in the nick of time to realize our weakness, repent and go straight before it is too late, and—

Whereas it has been the will of God to give us the Halseys, the Eisenhowers, the Chennaults, the Doolittles, the MacArthurs, the Cassin Youngs, the Bulkeleys, the "Butch" O'Hares, the Colin Kellys, the Dan Callaghans and the Five Sullivans, sparing us the Himmlers, the Gestapo boys, the hangmen's squads the dynamiters of crowded postoffices, and—

Whereas we have been privileged to keep this country—Abe Lincoln's country—"a Nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal," and to see it spared, through Providence, the blitz, the firing squad, the torch and the Gestapo, and—

Whereas the philosophies of a soft way of life, of compromise, of expediency and of dependence on Federal wet-nursing are swiftly being converted in the crucible of war into the old traditions of survival through the courage, integrity and character of the farmers of Lexington and Bunker Hill, and—

Whereas in a hazardous world which has seen nation after nation beaten into slavery, God has seen fit to endow us with His bright shield—

Now, therefore, let Thursday, November 25, be dedicated as a day for expressing our thanks to God for His rare blessings, acknowledging our debt for the strength that is ours through Him, and, incidentally, imploring Him to keep us from forgetting too soon.

Recent Elections

Why did the elections turn out as they did? Well, the following list doesn't pretend to be inclusive but dishes up a few off-hand reasons:

1. While the Administration hasn't bungled its foreign policy, as it has everything else, there's no evidence that any other administration might not have done a fair, even a good, job, with or without overseas flights. And a much better job on the home front!

2. With prices lower compared with this stage of the last war voters may credit this to (a) War Bonds, (b) twice as many men in armed services.

3. In view of subsidies, rollbacks, etc., which must be counted in any honest estimate of cost, prices are plenty high enough.

4. The inflationary spiral, in spite of this, has started; and prices—due to recent manipulations—will go higher.

5. The people think a hundred plus too many bureaucracies tinker with the economic machinery; and under the New Deal they fear the continuance of this after the war.

6. They think the Government has no coherent tax policy or the guts to put into effect a general sales (pay-as-you-go) tax.

7. They don't think a good foreign policy can alibi the New Deal record in regard to labor—from the sit-down strikes of sour memory to recent events; its subservience to labor leaders; its "domestic policy" with respect to the labor vote.

8. With clearer after-knowledge of the third term "draft" perhaps they issued a warning against use of similar tactics in the effort to grab a fourth term.

10. The people still feel the Administration is doing too many things for political effect and can't get the next election out of its skull.

Baruch's New Task

By Ernest Lindley

To Study And Recommend

IN CONVERSATIONS with Government officials and others, Bernard M. Baruch has sketched, in a preliminary way, his own views about his newly assumed duties as head of the postwar unit in the Office of War Mobilization.

LINDLEY

He has made it plain that he does not expect or wish to turn this unit into an operating agency. His assignment, as he views it, is to study and recommend. He expects the work of mobilization to be carried out by appropriate existing agencies. His view as to this has quieted to some extent, although it has not entirely removed, the disappointment and fears of War Production Board officials, who had expected that agency to have the responsibility for guiding industrial reconversion. Preliminary conversations are understood to have disclosed no important divergence of thought between these officials and Mr. Baruch as to the major policies to be followed in reconversion. These officials have not been completely reassured, however, as to the scope of the authority Mr. Baruch is likely to recommend for WPB during the reconversion period.

Mr. Baruch has gently but firmly rejected all suggestions that he attach to his unit representatives of agriculture, trade unions and industry. He has explained that the only interest which will be permitted to be represented in his unit is that of the Nation as a whole.

HE HAS ALSO made it plain that he does not intend to remain immured with his chosen aides and advisers until he can emerge with a complete blueprint for postwar demobilization. His job, as he sees it, is much less visionary. He proposes to study, one by one, the specific problems of demobilization on which decisions clearly must be made. He proposes to take them in the order of urgency.

The first of these, because it is already urgent, is commonly labeled "contract termination." It is urgent because contracts already are being terminated. Indeed, many have been terminated, as war requirements have shifted from one item to another. But we are now entering a period in which some productive facilities which hitherto have been devoted to the war can be released for essential civilian output. In total they probably will not be large until the war with Germany has been completed. Some increased resumption of civilian output, made possible by larger supplies of raw materials, will be achieved partly by the reopening of plants which were never converted to war production.

"Contract termination" is too narrow a title for the first problem Mr. Baruch has undertaken to study. A more appropriate title would be "industrial reconversion." Expeditious and equitable termination of contracts is only the first step. The second is the physical process of removing machines, partly manufactured items, and raw materials from war plants, so that the machines and materials for peacetime production can be brought in as rapidly as possible. The more rapid the reconversion, the shorter the period of postwar unemployment and the shorter the period of severe inflationary strain due to the tremendous excess of consumer buying power over goods available for purchase.

Unquestionably, the armed services will want to have certain war plants kept in stand-by condition for possible future needs. In many instances, however, this protection against the future may be obtained by segregating and storing the larger and more complicated machine tools, rather than by keeping entire factories intact. But the armed services should have the first call.

MR. BARUCH has made it clear that he favors the prompt settlement of terminated contracts—settlements which will be final unless subsequent investigation shows fraud.

The inventory of raw materials, partly fabricated parts, and machines turned back to the Government must be prompt and complete. Otherwise contractors will not be free to clear their plants for peacetime production. Moreover, until their war contracts are settled, they may experience difficulty in obtaining credits to finance reconversion. At best, in some cases, the RFC or some other Government-lending agency will probably have to stand ready to lend financial aid.

If Germany is defeated before Japan, as it almost certainly will be, a substantial part of our present war-production facilities can be released for reconversion to peacetime uses. The war against Japan almost certainly will require fewer tanks, trucks, mobile guns and other items of equipment for ground forces than are required for the war against Germany. The industrial and economic transition to peace will be less abrupt if Germany goes down a year or so ahead of Japan than if the war against both enemies should end simultaneously.

This, with full regard for the public interest and for the security of the Nation, now and in the future, in so far as it can be judged by the War and Navy Departments, is an objective which Mr. Baruch has set for himself in this, the first, of his postwar studies.

Text of Secretary Hull's Moscow Report

Mr. President, Mr. Speaker:

I appreciate deeply the high compliment of being invited to meet with you today. But I appreciate even more the fact that by your invitation you have emphasized your profound interest in the principles and policies for which the Moscow Conference stood, and in the progress made by the participating governments in carrying them forward.

In the minds of all of us here present, and of the millions of Americans all over the country and at battle stations across the seas, there is and there can be at this moment but one consuming thought—to defeat the enemy as speedily as possible. We have reached a stage in the war in which the United Nations are on the offensive in every part of the world. Our enemies are suffering defeat after defeat. The time will come when their desperate movement to destroy the world will be utterly crushed. But there are in store for us still enormous hardships and vast sacrifices. The attainment of victory will be hastened only in proportion as all of us, in this country and in all of the United Nations, continue to exert all possible effort to press home our advantage without the slightest relaxation or deviation.

The glorious successes which have already attended our arms and the confidence which we all feel today in assured, though still immensely difficult, victory would have been impossible if this country, and Great Britain, and the Soviet Union, and China, and the other victims of aggression had not each risen as a unit in defense of its liberty and independence. They would have been equally impossible if all these nations had not come together in a brotherhood of self-preservation.

Principles Important

While we are thus engaged in the task of winning the war, all of us are acutely conscious of the fact that the fruits of our victory can easily be lost unless there is among us wholehearted acceptance of those basic principles and policies which will render impossible a repetition of our present tragedy, and unless there is promptly created machinery of action necessary to carry out these principles and policies. The Moscow Conference is believed to have been an important step in the direction both of shortening the war and of making provision for the future.

The convocation of the conference was the result of a profound conviction on the part of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin that, at this stage of the war, frank and friendly exchanges of views between responsible representatives of their three governments on problems of postwar, as well as war, collaboration were a matter of great urgency. Up to that time, such exchanges of views had taken place on several occasions between our Government and that of Great Britain. But the exigencies of war had been obstacles to the participation of the Soviet government in such exchanges to the same extent. With the acceleration of the tempo of war against Germany, the necessity became daily more and more apparent for more far-reaching discussions and decisions by the three governments than had occurred theretofore.

Parley Atmosphere Good

I went to Moscow, by direction of President Roosevelt, to discuss with the representatives of Great Britain and the Soviet Union some basic problems of international relations in the light of principles to which our country, under the President's leadership, has come to give widespread adherence. It has never been my fortune to attend an international conference at which there was greater determination on the part of all the participants to move forward in a spirit of mutual understanding and confidence.

The conference met against the background of a rapidly changing military situation. From the east and from the south, the Nazi armies were being steadily hammered back into narrower and narrower confines. From the west, the Allied Air Forces were relentlessly and systematically destroying the nerve centers of German industrial and military power.

Formidable as the war task still is, it has been increasingly clear that the time is nearing when more and more of the territory held by the enemy will be wrested from his grasp, and when Germany and its remaining satellites will have to go the way of Fascist Italy. In these circumstances, new problems arise which require concerted action by the Allies, to hasten the end of the war, to plan for its immediate aftermath, and to lay the foundation for the postwar world. Our discussions in Moscow were concerned with many of these problems. Important agreements were reached but there were no secret agreements, and none was suggested.

Of the military discussions which took place it can be stated that they were in the direction of facilitating closer cooperation between the three countries in the prosecution of the war against the common enemy. I am glad to say that there is now in Moscow a highly competent United States military mission, headed by Maj. Gen. John R. Deane.

Future Considered

The attention of the conference was centered upon the task of making sure that the nations upon whose armed forces and civilian efforts rests the main responsibility for defeating the enemy will, along with other peacefully minded nations, continue to perform their full part in solving the numerous and vexatious problems of the future. From the outset, the dominant thought at the conference was that after the attainment of victory, cooperation among peace-loving nations in support of certain paramount mutual interests will be almost as compelling in importance and necessity as it is today in support of the war effort.

At the end of the war, each of the United Nations and each of the nations associated with them will have the same common interest in national security, in world order under law, in peace, in the full promotion of the political, economic and social welfare of their respective peoples—in the principles and spirit of the Atlantic Charter and the declaration by United Nations. The future of these indispensable common interests depends absolutely upon international cooperation. Hence, each nation's own primary interest requires it to cooperate with the others.

These considerations led the Moscow Conference to adopt the Four-Nation Declaration with which you are all familiar. I should like to comment briefly on its main provisions.

In that document, it was jointly declared by the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and China "that their united action, pledged for the prosecution of the war against their common enemies, will be continued for the organization and maintenance of peace and security."

World Organization Planned

To this end, the four governments declared that they "recognize the necessity of establishing at the earliest practicable date a general international organization, based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states and open to membership by all such states, large and small." I should like to lay particular stress on this provision of the declaration. The principle of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, irrespective of size and strength, as partners in a future system of general security will be the foundation stone upon which the future international organization will be constructed.

The adoption of this principle was particularly welcome to us. Nowhere has the conception of sovereign equality been applied more widely in recent years than in the American family of nations, whose contribution to the common effort in wartime will now be followed by representation in building the institutions of peace.

The four governments further agreed that, pending the inauguration in this manner of a permanent system of general security, "they will consult with one another and as occasion requires with other members of the United Nations with a view to joint action on behalf of the community of nations" whenever such action may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Self-Denying Ordinance

Finally, as an important self-denying ordinance, they declared "that after the termination of hostilities they will not employ their forces within the territories of other States except for the purposes envisaged in this declaration and after joint consultation."

Through this declaration, the Soviet Union, Great Britain, the United States and China have laid the foundation for cooperative effort in the postwar world toward enabling all peace-loving nations, large and small, to live in peace and security, to preserve the liberties and rights of civilized existence, and to enjoy expanded opportunities and facilities for economic, social and spiritual progress. No other important nations anywhere have more in common in the present war or in the peace that is to follow victory over the Axis powers. No one, no two of them can be most effective without the others, in war or in peace.

Each of them had, in the past, relief in varying degrees upon policies of detachment and aloofness. In Moscow their four governments pledged themselves to carry forward to its fullest development a broad and progressive program of international cooperation. This action was of world-wide importance.

As the provisions of the Four-Nation Declaration are carried into effect, there will no longer be need for spheres of influence, for alliances, for balance of power or any other of the special arrangements through which, in the unhappy past, the nations strove to safeguard their security or to promote their interests.

Political Problems Faced

The conference faced many political problems growing out of the military activities in Europe. It was foreseen that problems of common interest to our three governments will continue to arise as our joint military efforts hasten the defeat of the enemy. It is impracticable for several governments to complete any rapid understanding on such matters through the ordinary channels of diplomatic communication. The conference accordingly decided to set up a European Advisory Commission with its seat in London. This commission will not of itself have executive powers. Its sole function will be to advise the governments of the United States, Great Britain, and the Soviet Union. It is to deal with nonmilitary problems relating to enemy territories and with such other problems as may be referred to it by the participating governments. It will provide a useful instrument for continuing study and formulation of recommendations concerning questions connected with the termination of hostilities.

For the purpose of dealing with problems arising from the execution of the terms of surrender of Italy and with related matters growing out of the developing situation in that country, the conference established an Advisory Council for Italy. This council will consist of representatives of the governments of the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union, of the French Committee of National Liberation, and of the governments of Yugoslavia and Greece, as early as practicable. The members of the council will advise the Allied commander in chief and will make recommendations to the respective governments and to the French committee concerning nonmilitary problems relating to Italy.

Diplomacy Not Superseded

It was clearly understood that the setting up of these two agencies was not intended to supersede the usual diplomatic channels of communication between the three governments. On the contrary, arrangements were made for expeditious and effective handling of questions of concern to the three governments through tripartite diplomatic conversations in any one of the three capitals.

In a declaration on Italy, the conference set forth a number of principles on the basis of which democratic restoration of that country's internal political structure should take place. These principles—including freedom of religion, of speech, of the press and of assembly, and the right of the people ultimately to choose their own form of government—are among the most basic human rights in civilized society.

In a declaration on Austria, the forcible annexation of that unhappy country was pronounced null and void. It was further declared that Austria is to be given an opportunity to become reestablished as a free and independent state, although the Austrians were put on notice that in final analysis the treatment to be accorded them will depend upon the contribution which they will make toward the defeat of Germany and the liberation of their country.

Nazis to Be Punished

The conference also served as an occasion for a solemn public declaration by the heads of the three governments with regard to the perpetrators of the bestial and abominable crimes committed by the Nazi leaders against the harassed and persecuted inhabitants of occupied territories—against people of all races and religions, among whom Hitler has reserved for the Jews his most brutal wrath. Due punishment will be administered for all these crimes.

Finally, the conference gave preliminary attention to a number of other specific problems relating to the eventual transition from war to peace. A fruitful exchange of views took place on such questions as the treatment of Germany and its satellites, the various phases of economic relations, the promotion of social welfare, and the assurance of general security and peace.

These were among the outstanding developments at the Moscow Conference. The intensive discussion, lasting two weeks, did not and was not intended to bring about the solution of all the problems that are before us. Much less could we anticipate the problems that are bound to arise from day to day and from year to year. There were other problems such, for example, as questions relating to boundaries, which must, by their very nature, be left in abeyance until the termination of hostilities. This is in accordance with the position maintained for some time by our Government.

Cooperation Revitalized

Of supreme importance is the fact that at the conference the whole spirit of international cooperation, now and after the war, was revitalized and given practical expression. The conference thus launched a forward movement which, I am firmly convinced, will steadily extend in scope and effectiveness. Within the framework of that movement, in the atmosphere of mutual understanding and confidence which made possible its beginning in Moscow, many of the problems which are difficult today will as time goes on undoubtedly become more possible of satisfactory solution through frank and friendly discussion.

I am happy on this occasion to pay personal tribute to those with whom it was my privilege to confer in Moscow. Mr. Molotov arranged for the business of the conference in a most efficient manner. Both as chairman and participant, he manifested throughout the highest order of ability and a profound grasp of international affairs. Mr. Eden, with his exceptional wisdom and experience, exhibited the finest qualities of statesmanship. I found in Marshal Stalin a remarkable personality, one of the great statesmen and leaders of this age.

Russian People Praised

I was deeply impressed by the people of Russia and by the epic quality of their patriotic fervor. A people who will fight against ruthless aggression, in utter contempt of death, as the men and women of the Soviet Union are fighting, merit the admiration and good will of the peoples of all countries.

We of today shall be judged in the future by the manner in which we meet the unprecedented responsibilities that rest upon us—not alone in winning the war, but also in making certain that the opportunities for future peace and security shall not be lost. As an American, I am proud of the breadth and height of vision and statesmanship which have moved you, ladies and gentlemen, in each house of the Congress, to adopt, by overwhelming nonpartisan majorities, resolutions in favor of our country's participation with other sovereign nations in an effective system of international cooperation for the maintenance of peace and security.

Hull Sets Tone For 1944 Races With Foreign Policy Remarks

By Edward T. Folliard

The oft-expressed hope that American foreign policy will be eliminated as an issue in the campaign of 1944 and that politics will end at the water's edge was greatly strengthened yesterday after Secretary Hull's appearance before Congress.

It was noted that the Republicans were every bit as vigorous as the Democrats in applauding Hull. A stranger, unfamiliar with the line that divides the two parties in the House chamber, would have had a hard time telling which was which.

Secretary Hull himself remarked on the absence of partisanship on the question of foreign policy. Recalling how the Senate and House had adopted resolutions backing up what was accomplished at Moscow, he said:

"As an American, I am proud of the breadth and height of vision and statesmanship which have moved you, ladies and gentlemen, in each house of Congress, to adopt, by overwhelming nonpartisan majorities, resolutions in favor of our country's participation with other sovereign nations in an effective system of international cooperation for the maintenance of peace and security."

May Be Widely Quoted

That statement may be widely quoted in next year's presidential campaign if anybody tries to make foreign policy an issue.

When Republican leaders gathered at Mackinac Island in September, many of them expressed the hope that the 1944 campaign could be limited strictly to domestic issues. True, they thought that this would give them their best chance of victory. But it was also true that many of them were moved by the sincere belief that the country should be united on foreign policy, and that, as the saying goes, politics should end at the water's edge.

After Mackinac

After the Mackinac meeting, the Republicans in Congress had their first chance to throw off the isolationist label on the vote on the Fulbright resolution. An overwhelming majority of Republicans voted for it. On the "nay" side were 26 Republicans and 3 Democrats.

The Senate vote on the Connally resolution, which came after the Moscow agreement had been made public, brought an ever better Republican showing. Only five Senators voted against this. Three of these were Republicans—Johnson of California, Shipstead of Minnesota, and Langer of North Dakota—and two were Democrats, Reynolds of North Carolina and Wheeler of Montana.

Capitol Hill comment on Secretary Hull's speech yesterday included:

Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas of Senate Foreign Relations Committee—"It was a distinguished address. With clarity and broad statesmanship, the Secretary outlined the basic issues of peace and war."

Chairman Bloom (Democrat) of New York of the House Foreign Affairs Committee—"A wonderful speech delivered by a great American, a great statesman."

"Interesting," Says Martin

House Minority Leader Martin (Republican) of Massachusetts—"An interesting report and the House, of course, was pleased to get it first hand. It was an innovation which was pleasing to the House. It was particularly gratifying to have his assurance that no secret agreements were arrived at in Moscow."

Representative Carroll Reece, one of Tennessee's two Republican Congressmen, praised Hull's work as Moscow "as a great job which those of us in Tennessee who knew him best knew he would do." Reece said the Republican Party's Mackinac Declaration on Foreign Policy had been helpful to Hull.

Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, who had a seat in the House chamber, said Hull's speech was "a very fine one."

F. T. Orekhov, first secretary of the Russian Embassy, who attended in the absence of the Ambassador, said "I welcomed the opportunity to hear Mr. Hull make a great speech. It was my feeling that Mr. Hull's report will give everybody a clearer understanding of what was accomplished at Moscow, and will create a better understanding among the Allies."

The Gallup Poll

Progressive Sales Tax Idea Has Support Of About Half of Voters, Survey Indicates

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 18.—One of the important decisions now facing Congress is whether or not to swell the $2,143,000,000 tax revenue bill approved by the House Ways and Means Committee.

And if so—how?

The group most directly concerned—the American public—has already indicated through Institute polls its preference for a national sales tax as opposed to increased income taxes. Repeated polls have shown that a flat sales tax of 2 or 3 per cent seems a reasonable proposition to the American-at-war.

Compromise Suggested

In the tax bill as passed by the House Ways and Means Committee, however, both sales tax and increased income taxes have been rejected. A compromise which has been suggested is a graduated or progressive sales tax, which would skip bare necessities, touch lightly on less essential consumer goods, and bear down heavily on out-and-out luxuries.

If Congress, in the next few weeks, should explore such a possibility, it can do so in the knowledge that there is already a substantial public support for a progressive sales tax, although there is no clear-cut majority, for or against. While excise taxes, in their effect, are somewhat similar to a luxury tax, a substantial bloc of the population would still favor the progressive tax idea.

To a representative cross-section of American voters—about 7 out of every 10 of whom are in families which now pay income taxes, and all of whom would be affected by national sales tax—the Institute put this question:

"It is suggested that a Nation-wide sales tax be put on everything people buy, except bare necessities. On less essential things, the tax would start at 2 cents out of every dollar, and rise to 30 or 40 cents out of every dollar on luxuries. Would you favor or oppose a sales tax of this type?"

Favor	45%
Oppose	46
Undecided	9

Comments made to interviewers in the course of the survey show that to those favoring a progressive sales tax, its biggest appeal lies in the fact that it is more equitable than a national, flat-rate tax because it falls most lightly on the nonluxury buying, lower income group and hardest on the taxpayer who can afford luxuries.

English Experience

The experience of England, where a progressive sales tax has been found to operate generally satisfactorily, was cited as evidence.

Opposition to the progressive type of sales tax was based chiefly on the belief that most people were already carrying as heavy a tax load as feasible. Generally speaking, the Institute found the lower income group, Democrats, and residents of the larger cities less in favor of this type of sales tax than other population groups.

Virtually no difference exists between opinion in those areas which have already a local sales tax and those areas which have no such levy at present. Geographically, greatest support for a progressive tax seems to come from the Southern and West Central States, while most opposition is centered in New England States and on the Pacific Coast.

Navy Hero Begins Duties as Aide in Public Relations

Comdr. John L. Collis, 38-year-old veteran of the war in the Pacific, yesterday reported for duty as executive assistant to the director of Navy public Relations.

Collis, whose home is in Utca, N. Y., was on the U. S. S. Oglala when that vessel was sunk by the Japs at Pearl Harbor. He subsequently commanded the U. S. S. Tracy and later a division of minelayers.

The new public relations executive won the Legion of Merit for taking his mine craft into enemy waters and laying mines in the path of a large Jap naval force. His successful accomplishment of this dangerous and "vastly important mission," the Navy said, resulted in the positive sinking of one enemy ship and the probable destruction of another.

It's a Boy for Holdens

Hollywood, Nov. 18 (AP).—Arriving on the sixth birthday of his sister Virginia, a six-pound, nine-ounce boy was born today to Film Actress Brenda Marshall, wife of Lieut. William Holden, Army Air Forces. The child was named Peter Westfield.

TOPCOATS

England and Scotland are known for their fine quality woolens. They can certainly be proud of the fine coats they've sent us this season, despite wartime difficulties. You can be just as proud wearing one.

Burberrys sent us some wonderful West of England Coverts, Connemara Irish Tweeds, Saxonies, Fleeces, etc. From Rodex came magnificent, hand woven Shetlands and Whipcords. From Chester Barrie, of London, fine Cashmeres and unusual Tweeds. A most note-worthy collection!

Other Fine Topcoats $45 Upwards

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'The North Star,' Keith's, A Moving, Human Drama

"THE NORTH STAR," for purposes of quick elucidation of the title chosen by Lillian Hellman for the film pla presented by Samuel Goldwyn at RKO-Keith's this week, is not primarily an expression of poetic and obscure symbolism. It is the name of the little village in the Ukraine where live the group of people about whom swirl vivid and relentless events in the Russia of June, 1941.

The picture unfolds the story of these people, not as the mouthpiece of any political ideology or philosophy of government, but as simple human beings intent on happiness, freedom and the security of the future. It is a tale that could be translated into terms of American thought and character, or the ideals of any other liberty-loving nation of sound mind and heart.

It is, frankly enough, a play of violence that is by turns gay, ominous and hideously brutal. The contrast between its opening sequences and and its last is the contrast of the homely pursuits of a happy peace and the most stark realities of bloody and barbaric war. There is much in it at which the sensitive will cringe; an equal amount to which they will warm sympathetically and joyously. Miss Hellman's factual fiction has been given a superb production and the benefit of a well-chosen and memorable cast.

Many, no doubt, will catalogue it quickly as a "war picture." Superficially, it is one. At base, it is a thoughtful and powerful exposition of why, rather than how, this war is being fought, not alone by Russia, but by all of the other 43 nations comprising 80 per cent of the human race and why—if that mi acle can be worked—it should be the last.

All of the elements of immediate appeal are encompassed by the script. There are the jubilant opening scenes as the school term ends and the youngsters prepare for their walking trip to Kiev as the first adventure of their summer vacation. The farmers are busy getting their produce and stock off to the markets, with a community feast to end the celebration of a day of hard work. The community leader, Boris, is busy at his orderly chores; the noted scientist, Dr. Kurin, is performing the compassionate duties of the village doctor, and ardent loves are springing up among the youths of the town—between Marina and Damian to supply the central romantic theme—while the younger children give vent to their various adolescent enthusiasms. It is on the road to Kiev that the first bitter realization of invasion comes. It is not a pretty spectacle that ensues, although it serves merely to set the scene for the later ones of mounting savagery that are to come. The townspeople fire their village, the young men take to the hills to fight a guerilla warfare with clubs and rocks until arms can be run through to them. Not the restoration of the village, but its complete destruction forms the climax of the action, with the survivors of a victorious foray secure in their conviction that rehabilitation will be wrought in the end. This final fadeout was roundly applauded at yesterday's first performance.

Able Performances by Stellar Cast

Many notable performances are given in this composite of beauty and horror that is much of the time picturesquely lovely and continuously given the aid of a musical score in which Aaron Copland, composer, and Ira Gershwin, lyricist, have incorporated a great deal that is tunefully and humorously exhilarating. Walter Huston, the Dr. Kurin, and Carl Benton Reid, Boris, give strength and vigor to the more adult male roles, with Walter Brennan contributing one of his most valuable portrayals as the ancient Karp. Dean Jagger, Ann Harding and Esther Dale, as the second-generation parents, are efficient and forceful in slightly less conspicuous parts, and Erich von Stroheim presents another of his realistic studies of the bullnecked Nazi who abhors all that he does, but does it anyway, with apparent relish. Dana Andrews, Anne Baxter, Farley Granger, Jane Withers, Master Eric Roberts and little Ruth Nelson provide a youthful appeal that is one of the picture's greatest assets. Lewis Milestone's direction is such as to afford James Wong Howe an unexampled range for his genius at the camera without at any time sacrificing any quality of conviction in the relation of a story that is above all else intensely and movingly human.

In view of the magnitude of the major attraction—"The North Star" is a "big" picture—the supplementary short subjects are necessarily curtailed. On the bill, however, are a particularly interesting issue of the newsreel, covering the Moscow Conference and Secretary Hull's return to Washington and White House events immediately following, and a ridiculous Donald Duck cartoon comedy, revealing the hazards of "Home Defense."

Probably the most important thing to know is that, contrary to original announcement, "The North Star" is being presented continuously at Keith's at the regular scale of prices, instead of the advanced scale at first contemplated.

'Top Man,' Milt Britton Band Pile Up Comedy at Capitol

By Marjorie Kelly

With Donald O'Connor and Susanna Foster starring, and Lillian Gish and Richard Dix in supporting roles in "Top Man," on the screen, plus Milt Britton's Band, on stage, the Capitol Theater yesterday opened a bill which would seem to be of more than ordinary merit as "escapist" entertainment.

It does not live up to expectations, however. O'Connor, an adolescent actor, who amuses even people who ordinarily revolt at adolescent actors, is on the screen almost throughout the film's footage, and he makes the most of his material, some of which is funny. But Susanna Foster is seen too little to satisfy fans who may be attracted by her name in the cast. Dix and Miss Gish, likewise, are hardly seen.

The Lad Fools 'Em

The plot deals with the family difficulties of a boy whose father has gone to war, leaving him "top man" at home. His elder sister resents his attempt to take over paternal responsibility for her and her boy friend; his younger sister refuses to take him seriously, his teachers in college think he is cheating because, as a result of some unprecedented study, he passes his exams with honors and, worst of all, his girl friend, (Miss Foster) goes out with his rival while he is busy studying.

He finally solves all his troubles at once by getting girl friend, rival, both sisters and all the other kids in town to work with him at the local defense plant in their after-school hours.

Dialogue is burdened with stale humor and there's little really funny action. The film's chief entertainment value is in the three songs which Susanna Foster sings; in the jitterbug caperings of Peggy Ryan as the younger sister, and in O'Connor's treatment of a monologue and a song and dance he does with Miss Ryan.

That Goofy Band!

Milt Britton's comedy band shows limitless ingenuity in producing unpleasant sounds on unusuual instruments (a balloon, a rubber glove, etc.). Meanwhile, members of the band who are not playing maintan a three-ring circus atmosphere by their irrelevant antics. The act loses by being overlong.

The Juggling Jewels, two blonds and two brunettes, clad in black gowns with jewel-colored spangles, aren't too pretty, but they can juggle. Fred Roner, the "pickpocket comedian," has an audience participation act in which he invites a group of people onstage, circulates among them briefly, and then pulls out of his own pockets everything he's found in theirs. He's as fast with the ad-libs as he is with his fingers. Frank Gaby completes the line-up with his ventriloquism act.

The March of Time, "Youth in Crisis," is a survey of delinquent youth. With its usual superb impartiality the MOT searches the problem thoroughly, but does not stress the numerically few, but highly important, experiments with neighborhood clubs and war work which point a solution. The problem has been so much surveyed that one more expose, which offers no answer, leaves you little to say but "Tsch, Tsch."

LEONARD LYONS

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Nov. 18.

A director of the Associated Press met President Roosevelt shortly after the Supreme Court's decision in the Attorney General's prosecution of the A. P. as a monopoly. "Everything okay?" the President greeted the visitor . . . "Well," replied the newspaper official, "what are you trying to do—put us out of business?" . . . "No. I'm not trying to put you out of business," said the President. "I'm just trying to get you an extra customer."

WALTER PIDGEON

Ed Stettinius, the former head of United States Steel, who is now Undersecretary of State, has redecorated the office. Steel-topped tables, new accessories, chairs, etc., replaced the old State Department furniture Sumner Welles had used. It now looks like the office of a modern executive . . . On Stettinius' desk are a number of phones, all metal-colored, except one. The exception is a boudoir-white telephone. "This is the direct wire to the White House," Stettinius explained. "I had a white one installed because when I speak over that phone I don't want to find myself using the same tone of voice I use over the others."

Paul Smith, the San Francisco editor, now is training with the Marines at San Diego. Smith is the one who resigned as a lieutenant commander in the Navy to enlist as a private in the Marine Corps . . . His office at the San Francisco Chronicle still has his name on the door, awaiting the day when the war is over and he returns. It's the usual door, bearing the usual sign, "Private," after his name . . . On the day Smith received his first promotion in the Marine Corps, his secretary hired a painter to paint two words on his door. After his name, and "Private," the painter added the two words, to make it read "Private First Class."

"Oklahoma," one of the hit songs of the musical, "Oklahoma," will be adopted as the official song of the State of Oklahoma. The Oklahoma Chamber of Commerce is sending a delegation to New York to mark the event, together with the State's birthday, at the St. James Theater. The official celebration then will be continued at Oklahoma-born Sherman Billingsley's Stork Club . . . When Rita Hayworth Welles appears in the radio version of "The More the Merrier" Friday night, her husband, Orson Welles, will appear on the program incognito, playing a minor role . . . Walter Pidgeon will entertain in the Aleutians.

MGM will try a new stunt—bringing a group of its stars into the Capitol Theater as a vaudeville unit. Special music is being written for the company, and Lou Holtz will act as master of ceremonies . . . Mrs. Grace Chapple, wife of Commander "Moon" Chapple—the sub commander who was decorated for his heroic feats in the Pacific—christened her husband's new ship. This is the only time in this war that a lady christened a vessel commanded by her husband.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SOME OF THE PRESIDENT'S newspaper friends who have been consistently for him over a long period of years are now suggesting that this is a good time to turn the other cheek regarding his constant feud with the press. They suggest that he personally could step into the current newsprint shortage and take a strong stand on an issue which seriously threatens one of the basic freedoms of the country—freedom of the press.

Actually, a good many bureaucrats have been nibbling at the newsprint problem, but no one has stepped in with any forthrightness to cut red tape and solve the problem. It now looks as if only the White House could do this.

Not generally realized is the fact that newsprint shortage is due not so much to decreased woodpulp production in the Canadian forests, but to much greater use of cardboard and packing material in sending war supplies abroad. This is a terrific drain and, though U. S. publishers have patriotically cut their newsprint, they will have to cut to the bone unless energetic moves are made by the Government.

The plan put forward by newspaper executives friendly to the White House includes:

1. Greater use of war prisoners in the Canadian and Maine forests.

2. More equitable distribution of newsprint among publishers. At present the papers with the big Sunday editions have scarcely suffered at all, being able to absorb their paper cuts out of their Sunday "fat." On the other hand, medium-sized papers may have to take terrific punishment.

3. Stricter supervision of cuts by throw-aways, dodgers, comic magazines and newsprint users who have not kept such accurate records of their past consumption. The newspaper industry has suffered by its past efficiency, having kept very accurate records.

4. More emphasis on the paper-salvage campaign. At present only 35 per cent of the Nation's waste paper is being collected and salvaged. The waste paper reclaiming machinery is running at only 51 per cent of capacity. Approximately 6,000,000 tons of waste paper are normally collected and sold for paper board, but now only two million.

The newspapers stepped in and did a great job of collecting scrap iron when the Nation needed it, but now, when the newspapers need newsprint, they themselves are somewhat handicapped in blowing their horn.

What the White House will do remains to be seen.

Antisubsidy Fight

IT'S A SURE BET that the anti-subsidy bill fathered by Alabama's paternal Henry Steagall will pass the House of Representatives by a two-thirds vote. It will also pass the Senate. This would mean the abolition of subsidies on almost all products except those grown around Congressman Steagall's district—namely peanuts and cotton-seed. It would also mean the end of the President's most cherished plan to check inflation.

However—it is also considered a good bet that Congress would not pass the bill over the President's veto. The two-thirds on original passage would waver when it came to over-riding a veto.

Liquor Investigation

IF THE SENATE COMMITTEE investigating the liquor industry digs deeper than the surface, it will find one of the largest whiskey combines in history now controlling the liquor business of the United States. They will find that 80 to 90 per cent of all U. S. whiskey is in the hands of four big companies. They will also find that the Big 4 have been buying up little companies recently not merely to get their distilling equipment but to get their unused liquor stocks.

Even six years ago, during the TENC monopoly hearings, it was found that the Big 4—Schenley, Seagrams, Hiram Walker and National Distillers—produced 64 per cent of all whiskey. Equally important, they held 78 per cent of all 4-year-old stocks.

Since then, they have been buying more and more companies. Seagrams recently bought Frankfort Distillers, thereby acquiring Four Roses and Paul Jones. It is reported that National is now negotiating to buy Century. Others which may fall under the drive are Brown-Forman, Bean Distilling and Park & Tilford.

All this has caused the Federal Trade Commission to launch a quiet investigation under the Clayton Act. The Clayton Act prohibits any company from acquiring the stock of another company to lessen competition substantially.

How much cooperation there is between the Big 4 is not known. But it is significant that one bank, Bankers Trust of N. Y., has a hold on both Schenley and Seagrams through loans. Schenley borrowed 27 million dollars and Seagrams 26 million dollars, at about the same time.

Note—Hiram Walker is financed by Canadian capital, while Seagrams is largely held by the Bronfman family, also Canadian.

Capital Chaff

REPUBLICAN SENATORS Moore of Oklahoma and Revercomb of West Virginia are going to have a hard time explaining to war veterans why they voted against the overseas election bill in committee. Their excuse was they hadn't time to read it. But a week earlier, when the bill came up in committee, they had the same excuse. Veterans are likely to say that one week is enough time to read anything . . . Wheeler MacMillan, Farm Journal candidate for President, arrived in Wisconsin two days after Willkie! . . . The newspaper world may have a new editor. Senator Bob Reynolds of North Carolina may take over editorship of the Cincinnati Enquirer, owned in part by his wife . . . One America First friend of Senator Reynolds is getting up a petition in Georgia to have him run for President . . . Washington is interested in United States Judge "Jefty" O'Connor's proposal to punish the Germans by making them stay in each country until they build up all the property they have damaged . . . The Truman Committee has received reports of "sanctioned loitering" in the Naval torpedo plant at Alexandria, Va. . . .

Hull's Bible Days

WHEN CORDELL HULL was flying to Moscow he craned his neck like a tourist to see the sights that unrolled beneath him. He was especially interested in the Holy Land, and recalled all the old Bible names from his Sunday School days.

Passing over Palestine, someone pointed out the little town of Beersheba, which marks the southern limit of Palestine, as the town of Dan marks the northern limit.

Hull immediately called to mind the Biblical phrase, "From Dan to Beersheba," and he said, "Where's Dan?"

"Dan who?" asked one of his companions.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Sid Luckman would very much like to have a good day against the Redskins on Sunday afternoon. At this moment he is a very hot article in the pro league what with throwing seven touchdown passes against the Giants last Sunday and breaking two of Sammy Baugh's passing records, but he'd prefer to set some records in Washington.

POVICH

When last seen in Griffith Stadium, Luckman was having a horrible time of it. That was last December when the Bears and Redskins were playing it off for the title. Luckman was struggling merely to get his passes away, much less complete them. The Redskins were around his neck all afternoon. He was having no luck and he was taking a physical beating.

It wasn't all Luckman's fault. That Redskin line was surpassing itself that day, banging through the big Bear forwards and rushing him to distraction. Charley Berry, the head linesman that day, reports that Luckman was screaming at the Bears in the huddles. "Listen, you guys, this is the worst protection I've ever had," he told them. "I can't throw that ball without protection. Have you forgotten how to play football?"

The Bear coaches finally got Luckman out of there in desperation, He was taking big losses in preference to being rushed on his passes. They sent Charley O'Rourke, the freshman from Boston College into the game to take over Luckman's job. Only then did the Bears start to move. O'Rourke was great. He, not Luckman, looked like the Bears' best passer. It was Luckman's worst day in pro football. He'd like to erase that memory.

Of the 56 football players on the field Sunday, there will be only seven men who figured in that 1937 play-off game when the Redskins beat the Bears on the ice-covered field at Chicago, 28 to 21. Sammy Baugh and George Smith are the only relicts of the Redskins. Five of those 1937 Bears are still with the Chicago team, Guard Danny Fortmann, Bronk Nagurski, Ray Nolting, Guard George Musso and End George Wilson.

That 1937 backfield of the Redskins was probably the best in pro league history. It lined up Baugh, Cliff Battles, Ernie Pinckert and Riley Smith. Baugh was a sensation even in his freshman year, doing the kicking as well as the passing. Battles hit the line, ran the ends, caught Baugh's' passes and gave the job of playing safety man a dazzling whirl.

Riley Smith called the signals, kicked the field goals and the points after touchdowns. And was a tremendous blocker. Which gave the Redskins two terrific blocking backs with Pinckert playing the No. 2 back. Nobody blocked better than Pinckert. When Coach Ray Flaherty needed a backfield replacement he could call on Ed Justice, fastest man on the team, a superb blocker himself, and accomplice of Baugh on the justly famous Baugh-to-Justice touchdown pass that shook Justice far down field for Sammy's special pitch.

Bronko Nagurski was in the Bears' backfield that year. He was supposed to be slowing up, but you couldn't see it. With big Jack Manders he formed a tandem battering ram. The Bears had elusive little Keith Molesworth to skip through the tackles and around the ends. Bernie Masterson was the quarterback. Manders at that point in his pro career had kicked 214 points after touchdown in 225 attempts.

That wasn't the Bears' best backfield, though. You'd have to give a big edge to that 1940 crew which murdered the Redskins, 73-0. By this time Luckman had succeeded Masterson and had improved even on that fellow's smooth direction of the T attack. Bill Osmanski and Joe Maniaci were the line-crushers, and they compared not too unfavorably with Nagurski and Manders. That 1940 team had also, the all-time Bear climax runner in George McAfee. And Ray Nolting, a first-year man in 1937, was in there helping out nicely.

The Redskins, though, have never had a backfield to compare with that 1937 crew. Baugh is still in there and doing even a better job. In the intervening seasons, Dick Todd and Andy Farkas came along to do nicely, but Ray Flaherty could never assemble a backfield with all the excellent attributes of the Baugh-Battles-Smith-Pinckert unit.

This year's Redskin backfield is probably the closest approach to their best one. Coach Dutch Bergman has uncovered the running talents of Wilbur Moore, who could have played on that 1937 team. He blocks, too, along with Ray Hare. And Andy Farkas is the fourth member of the starting group. But there's nobody to run like Battles, nobody to block like Pinckert. They were the unforgettables.

Irish 1-2 Over Seahawks, With Score Very Close

By Caswell Adams

New York, Nov. 18 (INS).—It is seldom in any football season that two teams come up to a meeting, both with eight winning games behind them. But that is the situation this weekend when, at South Bend, mighty Notre Dame entretains mighty Iowa Naval, hereinafter referred to as the Seahawks.

Although the Seahawks are loaded with former professional players including swift Dick Todd of the champion Washington Redskins, Notre Dame is a 1 to 2 favorite in the betting marts at the moment.

This is the game of the day, and the Notre Dame stands will be jammed.

The Seahawks, coached by Lieut. Don Faurot, who formerly taught the University of Missouri, come in with 232 points under their belts as against 84 for the opposition.

No Runaway Score

The hosts, considered by many to be the finest college football team ever assembled, even minus its brilliant quarterback, Angelo Bertelli, have swamped the foe, 312 to 37. And in its last three games has run up 84 points on such teams as Navy, Army and Northwestern, powers in their own right.

The guess in this corner is that Notre Dame will win, but will have a stiff tussle—say about 18 to 9.

One other game that deserves attention around the country concerns two other naval teams, the preflight outfits of Del Monte and St. Mary's, who mix Sunday in San Francisco. Del Monte is the choice here.

And St. Mary's College ought to beat UCLA, which has lost seven in a row. Just as Colgate, not a particularly strong team, ought to pulverize hapless Columbia, which has also lost seven, but which is happily ending its season.

Minnesota looks like money in the bank over all-losing Wisconsin, just as does Northwestern over Illi-

11 Michigan Hunters Lose Gas Rations

Detroit, Nov. 18 (AP).—In their first "crackdown" on Michigan deer hunters charged with violating gasoline rationing regulations, Office of Price Administration officials have suspended rations of 11 motorists for from 30 to 90 days starting December 1.

Fred W. Lindbloom, Detroit district OPA enforcement attorney, said the 11 suspensions were meted out in the first 30 cases heard by OPA hearing boards at Mackinaw City. Cases of 19 hunters, he said, were referred back to their local boards because, while they were not in violation of mileage allowances at this time, they would be by the time they returned home.

Violations charged included "pooling" of "A" coupons, using tractor gasoline and using gasoline stored since the start of rationing without surrendering or destroying coupons.

DiMaggio, Spouse Agree on Alimony

Los Angeles, Nov. 18 (INS).—Baseball star Joe DiMaggio and his estranged wife, Dorothy Arnold, today agreed upon alimony payments of $500 a month plus $1000 cash pending trial of her divorce suit.

The amount represented a reduction of $150 in Miss Arnold's original demand for $650 a month for the support of herself and 2-year-old Joe, jr.

The agreement was filed as a stipulation by Miss Arnold's attorney, Stanley A. Phipps. Phipps said he hoped the entire case could be settled by agreemnt.

Fort Meade Hospital Quintet Scores, 56-37

Edgewood Arsenal, Md., Nov. 18. With Charley Devic scoring seven field goals and three free tosses for 17 points, 100th General Hospital Quint of Fort George G. Meade, Md., last night registered a 56-37 triumph over Edgewood Arsenal five here last night.

Bear Coaches Laugh Off Redskin Injuries

Baugh, Three Others Miss Redskin Practice

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Chicago Bear coaches hard-boiled Hunk Anderson and Luke Johnsons were reported bored to tears yesterday by consistent reports of Redskin injuries, centering around leg hurts to Sammy Baugh, Willie Wilkin, Dick Farman and Bob Masterson.

But Coach Dutch Bergman was not kidding when he excused Baugh, Farman and Masterson from the twilight practice session while Wilkin was on the field but merely for the fresh air. Farman did not even report to the stadium.

Baugh, who has missed only one game in seven years of pro football, watched in his civilian Texas attire as Bergman put the squad through a long workout with second stringers occupying four places on the starting team.

Hurt in Touch Game

Slingin' Sam is still favoring the leg hurt in, of all things, a touch football game. If the game had been yesterday Baugh would have played, possibly the entire 60 minutes, but as a precautionary measure Bergman excused him from the practice session. "I think he'll be all right Sunday," was Bergman's comment.

The most doubtful starter of the four injured players is Farman who may not even dress for the game if his leg does not show overnight improvement. Al Fiorentino or Tony Leon will probably take his place.

Wilkin said his knee was "a little better," while Masterson had the same to say for the leg which is carrying the after effects of a bad ankle sprain plus an added hurt from Sunday's game.

With Baugh out Leo Stasica and George Cafego handled the kicking and passing portion of the practice before Bergman got down to the serious business at hand. Bergman was bothered with a lame back, Line Coach Turk Edwards with a bad cold and all in all the Redskin camp was hardly the picture of a confident ball club.

Bears Belittle Reports

Meanwhile the Bears who have not been extended for five straight games, compared to the Redskins' tough road, are reported in top physical condition. The Bear coaching staff insisted on belittling the reports of Redskin injuries, however, and they are prepared to meet the 'Skins at their very best.

What is bothering the Redskins is that in two of the previous games of the six-game series the 'Skins were a battered outfit at kick-off time and took terrific lacings, 31 to 7 in 1938, when Baugh played with a brace, and 73 to 0 in the '40 championship play-off when several players were handicapped by braces, casts, etc.

Bergman Says:

Luckman Due Credit for Better Bears

Take Lee Artoe, Bob Nowaskey, Ray Bray, Hugh Gallarneau, John Siegal, Joe Stydahar, Charlie O'Rourke, Frank Maznicki and Bill Osmanski away from the Chicago Bears and what have they got?—why they've got a better team than last year according to Redskin Coach Dutch Bergman.

The nine players mentioned are among a dozen or more the Bears lost between last December's championship game and Sunday's clash at Griffith Stadium. Sure, they've picked up Jim Benton and Dante Magnani from Cleveland, plus a few rookies as fill-ins, but their gains cannot compare with their losses.

Sid Luckman makes the difference, according to Bergman, Luckman having a great year in comparison to a fair season in 1942, even though he had Charley O'Rouke as an understudy last season.

Luckman played 11 league games last year, completed 57 of 105 passes for 1023 yards and 10 touchdowns. The Bears were not as dependent on his passing but compare Sid's 11-game performance in '42 with his record for eight this season.

To date Lou Little's pride, in eight games, has thrown 158 times and completed 91 for 1808 yards and 23 touchdowns, far better than his achievements for the entire season last year. Luckman has thrown all but 26 of the Bears' passes with 25 credited to Bob Snyder and one to Harry Clark.

Luckman's punting is off from his 40-yard average of last year with 35.3 this season, but Sid has been required to kick only 26 times to date. Snyder has also helped out with the Bears' punting.

Al Glossop Passes Navy Physical Exam

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP).—One of the Chicago Cubs' recent acquisitions for the 1944 team probably will play ball for a Navy nine.

Infielder Al Glossop, bought by the Cubs from Brooklyn for the waiver price, passed his Navy physical examination yesterday. Glossop, 29, married and a father, formerly played with the Philadelphia Phillies. He lives in Belleville, Ill.

Harry Parr Elected To N. Y. Jockey Club

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Harry A. Parr III, president of Pimlico Race Track, today was elected a member of the Jockey Club (New York).

F. S. (Skiddy) Von Stade, who earlier was named president of the Saratoga Race Track, succeeding the late George Bull, was elected a steward of the Jockey Club, filling the vacancy caused by Bull's death.

Montgomery, Jack in Title Bout Tonight

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Bobcat Bob Montgomery and Bouncing Beau Jack are going to straighten out one-half of the much-cut-up world lightweight championship in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night and it looks as if Bobcat Bob is going to do most of the straightening.

Bob and the Jumping Jack from Georgia tangle in a 15-rounder for that piece of the crown sanctioned in New York. This is not to be confused with the National Boxing Association's portion, now held by swarthy Sammy Angott.

It is the first title tussle in the Garden since Bobcat Bob took the bauble away from Bouncing Beau last May and the neighbors and their children are going to bulge the triple-decked Eighth Avenue sports soupbowl for this one. Promoter Mike Jacobs already has more than $60,000 in the bank from advance sales and is figuring on a crowd of 17,000 to 18,000 and a gate that is almost certain to hit $90,000 and may even go into six figures.

The 49th street wagering experts think Montgomery is such a sure-shot to repeat his first win that they've installed the Philadelphia Negro a 1 to 3 favorite over the one-time shoe-shine boy from the Augusta National Golf Club. This corner likes Bob to win handily.

The Beau hasn't been too hot since Montgomery gave him that going over last spring. In his most recent start he was outpointed by Bobby Ruffin, a local lightweight who had never before been regarded as belonging in the same ring with the Jumping Jack.

However, on that occasion, Beau was suffering from an injured knee, an injury he says is all healed now. It better be, because the Bobcat is no one to trifle with, even when you're in grade-A condition.

4 Kayoes Mark Fights at GU

Four technical kayoes featured the semifinals of the Georgetown University Army Specialized Training Program boxing tournament last night in Ryan Gym at the Hilltop. Finals of the tournament, which is being staged by Marty Gallagher, well-known local referee, will be fought today at 6:30 p. m.

The results:

Featherweight class—Joe Dillon, Savannah, Ga., decisioned Art Raya, Los Angeles.

Lightweight class—John McCulloch, New York, decisioned Walter Atwell, Cleveland; Dail Bush, Kalamazoo, decisioned John Leonard, Appleton, Wis.; Earl Gage, Spokane, decisioned James Walter, Albany, N. Y.

Middleweight class—Elliot Burbee, W. Orange, N. J., decisioned Robert Wightman, Ottawa, Kans.; Morris Fearlberg, Bronx, N. Y., scored three round T. K. O. over Kenneth Behrend, Chicago; William Popp, St. Paul, scored one round T. K. O. over Willard Haring, Reading, Pa.; Donald Coiner, Columbus, Ohio, decisioned Elmer Kus, Chicago.

Heavyweight class—Arthur Cook, Royalton, Ill., decisioned Robert Harvey, Lansing, Mich.; Ervin Drake, Chatham, N. J., scored two round T. K. O. over William Schuster, Mahoney City, Pa.

Referee—Eddie LaFond (Catholic University).

Army to Find Brown Bears No Pushover

Providence, R. I., Nov. 18 (AP).—Army with one of the best lines in the East, tangles with Brown, afflicted with one of the most porous forward walls in the same sector, this Saturday, but the Cadets aren't likely to have a walkaway, although the game will be played on their lot.

That's because Daniel (Doc) Savage has definietly discarded his crutches and will be ready in his effort to outshine such West Point greats as Glenn Davis, Doug Kenna and the rest.

Savage is the young man who hobbled off the bench last Saturday and registered two touchdowns in three minutes as the Bruins came from behind to down the United States Coast Guard Academy, 34 to 31.

That was the fifth victory in six starts this season, Holy Cross taking the opener by a 20-to-0 count.

Savage on Sidelines

Savage was injured in the victery over Tufts and had to sit on the sidelines as his mates eked out a 28-to20 verdict over Princeton and followed with a 21-to-20 decision over Yale.

The first thing Savage did when he entered the Coast Guard battle was to uncorkn a 69-yard pass for a score and only minutes later he gave his creaking knees a rugged test by romping 70 yards on a punt return for the winning points.

While he was injured, John Cokefair and Charles Tiedemann shared running honors and John Pattee continued his kicking. The native Rhode Islander now has converted 50 of 54 touchdowns during his collegiate career.

But while the Bears can match the Army, ball carrier for ball carrier, there is little comparison between the two lines. Brown doesn't ever have a reasonable facsimile of the Cadets' Francis Merritt at ackle or West Point's Cas Myslinski at center.

Short on Guards

In fact, Harry Stover is a regular guard up front for Coach Skip Stahley, but when the mentor wants to give either of his tackles—Bill Bateman and Bradford Campbell—a rest, he has to switch Stover to one of the spots.

"I can't substitute, I've got to juggle," says Stahley of his meager line material which became even more depleted after the recent V-12 graduations.

Among those leaving was George Hindmarsh, a better than average end. However, the Browns acquired Ed Fiorentino from Boston College as a transfer student at the start of the year. The former Eagle starred in the Orange Bowl last January and has been teaming with the Bear passers in an effective aerial combination this fall.

North End Holds Season's Finale

The last horse show of the current season will begin at 1 p. m. Sunday at the North End showgrounds on East-West highway, west of 16th st., with a long list of classes for both hunters and jumpers.

Outings include events for 5-gaited saddle horses, hacks, warmup jumpers, ladies' hunters, working hunters, open jumpers, knock-down-and-out, handy hunters, open hunters, and two championships.

Michigan Works Out Secretly for Buckeyes

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 18 (AP).—The Michigan football squad, drilling behind closed gates, received its last heavy work today for the Western Conference final Saturday with Ohio State.

The injured Elroy (Crazy Legs) Hirsch warmed up along the sidelines, but did not participate in the contact work. Bob Nussbaumer will continue at left halfback, and coaches said it was doubtful whether Hirsch would get into the game.

Gonzaga, St. John's In Grid Tilt Tonight

The annual hammer-and-tongs battle between Gonzaga High and St. John's Prep School will get under way at 8:15 p. m. tonight at Griffith Stadium and despite St. John's brilliant record and Gonzaga's several defeats, it will be anybody's ball game.

The afternoon games today will be between locally undefeated Coolidge visiting the Western Raiders, while Central will meet Eastern at Central and Wilson will entertain Fairfax High.

Big interhigh game of the week will be between Roosevelt and Tech tomorrow for on its outcome will depend who will meet Coolidge in the championship playoff. If Roosevelt wins the Riders will clash again with Coolidge on Turkey Day, while if Tech wins the Trainers will play off a tie with Wilson on Thanksgiving, with the winner going against Coolidge on November 30.

Meanwhile, both Gonzaga and St. John's teams have been working out with fervor. Sale of tickets for the annual Catholic classic has been reported good.

With Tommy Dunnigan, the Gonzaga junior varsity player hurt in practice, reported somewhat improved, the Gonzaga boys will be going into the game with their hearts in it much more than when they bowed to Eastern last week, just after the accident that snapped Tommy's spine.

Coach Samuel (Bo) Richards is counting on Joe Hickson's passes to Bob Horan and Angelo Zanger to turn the trick for the Eagles, while Angus Lamond of the Johnnies will lean on George Hughes, Tommy Hook and Andy Hayden.

Tickets for the Washington-Lee vs. George Washington High School football game Thanksgiving Day in Alexandria will go on sale Tuesday in the front hall of Washington-Lee High School, Arlington, Va. They will be available there Tuesday and Wednesday from 4 to 6 p. m. Reserved seats are 85c; general admission, 55c.

Army Regains Halfback Davis

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Glenn Davis was back in uniform for today's practice session as the Army ended heavy work for Saturday's date with Brown. Coach Blaik devoted the workout to a long drill on pass defense.

Army-Navy Game Shift Rejected

By the Associated Press

Undersecretary of War Patterson rejected yesterday a recent plea by Representative Weiss (Democrat) of Pennsylvania that the Army-Navy football game be played in a metropolitan area, where upward of 75,000 persons could attend. The game is scheduled for West Point, November 27.

Replying to Weiss' letter of November 8, Patterson said he appreciated the candor and public interest expressed, but playing the game in New York, Baltimore or Philadelphia would be incongruous with the war effort because of transportation and fuel shortages.

The same conditions existed last year, when the teams met at Annapolis and the Cadets were not permitted to attend. This year it is Army's "home game," and the Midshipmen will not be there to see it, Patterson said.

36 Iowa Seahawks Invade Notre Dame

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 18 (AP).—A squad of 36 Iowa Seahawks, including the injured Halfbacks Frank Maznicki and Dick Kieppe, was named today to make the trip to South Bend and Saturday's epic gridiron clash with Notre Dame.

The Navy public relations office said Kieppe was being taken along as "a reward." It made no such comment about Maznicki. This was taken as an indication that Maznicki may see some action, although he has not practiced all week.

In the final full-scale workout before leaving tomorrow for Indiana, the preflight outfit was given a general polishing on offense and defense by Coach Don Faurot.

Bear Coach Credits Grange as 'T' Formation Originator

By Harold Claassen

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Harold (Red) Grange, Illinois iceman who won about every football honor there was two decades ago while chilling Illini foes, is credited by the Chicago Bears with introducing the man-in-motion play, now common to all T-formations.

Luke Johnsos of the Bears, says that back in 1929, Grange was playing left halfback for the Bears and Carl Brumbaugh was at quarter. The Bears were having some success with a quick opening play in which Grange faked to his right.

But the Redhead finally tired of rushing to his right on every play finally took an unannounced excursion to his left.

When he returned to the huddle he told Brumbaugh "nobody covered me at all."

So Grange repeated his adventure with Brumbaugh tossing him a pass that was good for 20 yards. The play has been a fundamental of T-minded elevens ever since.

Charles and Walter Brown, identical twins from Westfield, N. J., took especial delight in battering each other in last Saturday's Yale-Princeton football game.

Charles, Princeton's roving center, hurried back to help brother Walter, Yale end, rise after one of their collisions.

Later Charles told his Princeton mates in the huddle "I only picked him up so that I could knock him down again."

The 1943 season will be remembered a long time for its many warborn oddities. And the best of them, in our book, is that Southern California was named to the Rose Bowl less than 24 hours after taking a 35-to-0 shellacking from March Field.

Johnsos also related that Bob Zuppke, erstwhile coach of Illinois, regarded himself as one of the founders of the T-formation and its deceptive style of ball handling.

Zuppke, according to Johnsos, many years ago was seated high in the stands scouting an opponent with two men well prepared for any sudden change in temperature on the right and two others in similar shape on his left.

"I decided right there," Johnsos says Zuppke told him, "that if four guys in their condition could pass around a bottle that I could smell but couldn't find, four sober players with a football ought to be able to drive their opponents nuts."

Ecomint Wins Marlboro's Bel Air Stud Purse

War Agent, Favorite, 4 Lengths Back

By Walter Haight

Marlboro, Md., Nov. 18.—Taking command at the break, Ecomint was never seriously threatened and carried the colors of Mrs. G. Campbell to victory in the Bel Air Stud purse, best offering on the Thursday program. Ecomint, at home on the deep track, finished 4 lengths in front of the favorite, E. Walters' War Agent and an additional length and a half in advance of E. A. Nicodemus' Granny Cake.

Excellent weather aided in luring a crowd of 5000 to the track and those who invested in the chances of Ecomint collected at the rate of $14.80 for each $2 investment. Jockey E. Carrillo rode the winner over the 6½-furlong course in 1:28.

War Agent was shuffled back at the break and came with a bold rush in the closing stages. Granny Cake also finished briskly to take the show in a photo with Queen Minatoka. Ecomint opened a good lead early and was going easily at the end.

There were 408 winning daily double tickets on the combination of 4 and 4. Mrs. Thomas Bonham's First Family won the first race while John Foster's Cushlamacree took the second. The double paid $16.60.

Luckman Is Due Credit—Bergman

playing his fourth year with the Bears, is also having his best season. He is leading the league's ball carriers to date with an average of 4.6 yards every time he packs the pigskin. His 465 yards gained in eight games nearly double his 11-game total last year.

Gary Famiglietti is running far beyond the pace which earned him an all-league berth at fullback last year and the Bears miss Maznicki in the ball carrying department, but Magnani, plucked from the grab-bag of Cleveland players, has come up with the impressive average of 6.8 yards in 41 times as a ball carrier.

Luckman is the brains behind the ball carriers. He handles the ball on every offensive play. Luckman demands protection and has been getting it behind the big Bear line. Luckman—and the Bears—have been great.

1944 Derby Week Late, Col. Winn Says

By Charles Dunkley

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP).—The 1944 Kentucky Derby, marking the seventieth running of the historic race, will be on Saturday, May 6, almost a week later than this year.

Col. Matt Winn, the 82-year-old guiding genius of the Nation's No. 1 turf event, made this announcement today at the meeting of the American Turf Association, which controls Churchill Downs at Louisville, Ky., among other racing properties. The date, Colonel Winn said, will be subject to approval by the Kentucky State Racing Commission.

The race will again carry $75,000 in added value, with a gold cup going to the owner of the winning thoroughbred. This makes it the richest turf event in the world, since the Santa Anita Handicap has been wrapped in moth balls for the duration.

The derby probably will be patterned after the 1943 event—a "trolley car affair" restricted to citizens in the Louisville area to cooperate with the Office of Defense Transportation in avoiding unnecessary train travel.

"It's too early to go into that," Colonel Winn explained, "but we shall cooperate with Government agencies in every way possible."

Colonel Winn, who stood on the back of his father's grocery wagon to watch Artistides gallop to victory in the first running of the derby back in 1875, has witnessed them all since. He's been in charge of the race, as managing director of Churchill Downs, for the past 41 years.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

War Department Cutting Personnel

War Department is steadily reducing its personnel. Its total number of civilian employes now is 1,188,000. Six months ago the number was 1,400,000. Army Service Forces has cut its staff in the neighborhood of 300,000 during that time, from more than a million to 800,000. Army Air Forces' expansion has offset some of the ASF slash. The Army figures don't include so-called "force" account employes, laborers who work on engineering projects on a per diem basis. There are between 35,000 and 40,000 of these. During the boiling down period the Army has transferred several thousands to private payrolls and the taxpayers are continuing to pay their salaries, but it's clear, too, that the Army has come through with its promised cut in personnel.

KLUTTZ

The department now claims to have 35,094 employes in the departmental service here and this is compared with more than 50,000 it had six months ago. But it has 16,511 other civilians here who are carried as "field" employes—the employes are on the staffs of field offices located here. The number of "field" employes has been increased substantially while the departmental personnel was being cut. Over-all, it makes no difference, the department still has more than 50,000 civilians here. But from the departmental service alone—from January through September—more than 5000 employes here went into the military service. Some 4000 others quit, too; 1591 said they were needed at home, 1483 for personal reasons, and 703 because their offices were transferred.

Ernest Jennes has left Justice to join the legal staff of Foreign Economic Administration. Several other top-drawer lawyers from Justice also are slated for FEA . . . Army officers these days have a hard time keeping track of their ranks. A Pentagon officer the other day announced he was a full colonel in the Army Air Forces, a major in the Army of the United States, both ranks temporary, but his permanent rank was first lieutenant in the United States Army . . . Dr. Leonard White, former GOP member of the Civil Service Commission, and Henry Reining of the Institute of Public Affairs, will leave soon for a mission to Brazil where they'll tell how Civil Service works here.

The first definition of a BUREAUCRAT is pretty good: It is: "Anyone in Government who says 'no.' If you want to be known as efficient and a great public servant, always say 'yes'." Well, that starts off our drive to find out who and what are bureaucrats. Send us your definition . . . Civil Service Commission has $2600 investigator jobs open . . . That long-predicted reorganization of Army Service Forces may not be as sweeping as had been planned . . . The Truman Committee will renew its investigation of the cost of the Army's oil project in Canada . . . The Navy will soon announce a plan to give insignia to civilian employes who serve with merit certain lengths of time . . . Suggested as a name for the Arlington Farms newspaper: "Girlie-cues."

Interior Department's employe suggestion program gets underway today with a mass meeting this afternoon in the auditorium. Five employes whose suggestions have saved the Government millions in cold cash, critical materials, and manpower will be called to the platform and given awards of excellence by Secretary Ickes. Similar services will be held today in Denver and Portland where the department has large blocs of employes. From now on Interior will put some drive behind the suggestion program and it has a splendid record of getting results.

That Christmas treat that was being lined up for Federal employes—music by Benny Goodman's Band with Frank Sinatra and his swoon songs at a big free dance—now appears to have collapsed. It's the same old story—Washington hasn't a big enough place to stage the affair. Here's what happened: The Pepsi Cola Co. had retained Goodman and Sinatra to come here and entertain the Federal employes. Two other dances with name bands performing also were planned for the holiday period. The place tentatively set was Uline's Arena. Yesterday the company officials spent the day with Federal welfare and recreation officials trying to devise some equitable way of distributing tickets without making a lot of people mad.

After several hours of discussion no plan was evolved which would take care of all the complicated problems. The plan wasn't dropped completely but unless someone comes through with a bright idea pretty quick it will be.

Man, 64, Held For 7 Months, Freed as Sane

Edward Page Jenkins, 64, who was held at St. Elizabeths Hospital for seven months while the red tape which barred him is unraveled, was declared sane yesterday and released by Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court.

On March 17, Jenkins walked into Gallinger Hospital complaining of haziness and an abdominal ailment and he never got out of hospitals from that time until yesterday.

Here is Jenkins' description of the circumstances of his incarceration:

Jenkins came into town from Camp Spring Airport, where he was employed, and had a few beers. Then, a stranger gave him two cigarettes and Jenkins became dizzy. He went to Gallinger where he said he was drugged by the cigarettes and he found himself in the psychiatric ward in a hurry.

Declared Mentally Unsound

On March 22, he was sent to St. Elizabeths on a temporary order authorizing his commitment. He was interviewed by the Mental Health Commission and by a court order on March 30 was declared of unsound mind.

Jenkins had, the hospital officials admit, no feeling of resentment or wish for revenge for his incarceration. But he couldn't be convinced he was crazy.

The hospital diagnosis was that he had mild confusion, mild disorder, mild emotional instability and irritability, and a clouding of the sensorium helped along by alcohol.

Finally Engages Lawyer

As he began to make efforts for his release, the red tape began unravelling. The hospital authorities first futilely searched for relatives who could take care of him, and then tried to find the State in which he was domiciled so authorities there would take him off their hands.

"I was disgusted with this, so I got myself a lawyer," Jenkins said yesterday. The lawyer was Louis Lebowitz, who had a spectacular case two weeks ago in which he freed another St. Elizabeths inmate. Lebowitz got out a writ of habeas corpus and it took just five minutes for Justice Letts to free Jenkins.

Threatening Letters Enter Henry Trial

The prosecution introduced yesterday into the trial of Jeffries D. Henry, 36, charged with the first-degree murder of his wife, Lola, two torn letters retrieved from an ashcan to show that shortly before she was slain he had addressed her in indecent and threatening terms.

Mrs. Louise Davidson, 1219 Massachusetts ave. nw., sister of Mrs. Lola Jane Henry, who was shot in a restaurant at 1109 13th st. nw., testified that she found the letters and turned them over to the United States Attorney's office.

Sent From New Orleans

The letters were sent from New Orleans on April 24, when Henry was in the Louisiana city, just three days before the shooting, it was claimed.

Henry was a former White House and Metropolitan policeman. He has four children.

Baker C. Lyerly, brother-in-law of Mrs. Henry, said the defendant was in New Orleans on April 24 seeking his wife. But at the time, Mrs. Henry was on the way to Washington to attend a funeral.

"He said the first time he saw her," Lyerly testified, "he was going to shoot her down like a dog and not give her a chance."

Lyerly testified later that Henry said, as he pulled out a gun: "You see, Baker, I'm not here for any pleasure."

Precinct Detective Arthur E. Fredette, first officer on the scene of the shooting, said the following was the conversation after the shooting:

"What happened?"—Fredette.
"I shot her."—Henry.
"Who?"
"My wife."
"Is this your wife?"
"Yes."
"What was it about?"
"I heard she was running around with a buck private in the Army and I was a sergeant myself. That's why I shot her."

Hope R. Miller Named to Christen Ship Tomorrow

Baltimore, Nov. 18 (AP).—Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller, of The Washington Post, will christen the 16,000-ton twin-screw tanker S. S. Aucilla, which will be launched at the Bethlehem-Sparrows Point shipyard Saturday.

Mrs. Miller was named as a "representative newspaper woman" to sponsor this vessel, the 18th of its kind to be constructed at the Sparrows Point yard in a schedule which calls for 24 deliveries. Members of the Chesapeake Association of the Associated Press who will attend the group's fall business session in Baltimore this weekend are among the guests expected at the launching.

The tanker was named for a river in Florida.

RAF Leader to Talk

Guy P. Gibson, who led 19 British bombers in the attack on the Ruhr dams, will tell the story of this spectacular achievement to members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall tonight. This RAF veteran of 13 raids revealed that the attack cost the British one dam, bombed for practice in the months of training for the thrust into Germany.

Apostolic Delegate intones prayer: Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani (reading) recites prayers over the kneeling form of the Most Rev. Francis J. Haas, during the consecration of the latter as Bishop of Grand Rapids.

The Right Rev. Msgr. Francis J. Haas, former dean of the school of social science at Catholic University, was consecrated bishop of Grand Rapids, Mich., in elaborate ceremonies at St. Andrew's Cathedral, Grand Rapids, yesterday.

The apostolic delegate, Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, was consecrator and Archbishops Edward Mooney of Detroit and Moses Elias Kiley of Milwaukee served as co-consecrators.

Bishop Haas resigned from the chairmanship of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee when he was appointed by Pope Pius XII several weeks ago to succeed Bishop Joseph C. Plagens, who died March 31.

Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch of Chicago, paying tribute to Bishop Haas in a sermon following the consecration ceremony, said:

"Bishop Haas takes up his new work . . . with a rare richness of knowledge and experience. With zeal and intelligence he has labored for a wholeness of Christian living and resolutely has opposed the miasmic secularism of our times . . . .

"He loves men, and among men he has a particular love for the weak and helpless. In his many activities, which have led him into the fields of economics and labor relations, Bishop Haas has had only one purpose and objective, and that to make men see there is but one Savior given them—Christ Jesus our Lord."

Bishop Haas, 54 years old, is a native of Racine, Wis., where he was ordained to the priesthood in 1913. After studying at Johns Hopkins University and at Catholic University he accepted a teaching post at Catholic University in 1919 and was director of the National Catholic School of Social Service from 1931 to 1935, when he returned to his home diocese at Milwaukee as head of St. Francis seminary, St. Francis, Wis.

He has been a special conciliator of the U. S. Department of Labor since 1935 and has participated in conciliation of an estimated 1500 labor disputes.

He is a past president of the Catholic Association for International Peace and was active for many years in the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems.

The French Pay Their Bill

Henri Hoppenot, Washington representative of the French National Committee, hands a check for 15 million dollars to Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley, paying off the bill for all civilian lend-lease supplies This check brought their total payments to more than 56 million dollars.

Plan to Rename Streets Killed In Face of Merchant Protests

Plans to rename downtown sections of Vermont Avenue and 15th and 17th sts. were abandoned by the National Park and Planning Commission yesterday, following protests by business groups and a letter from the District Commissioners opposing any name changes.

Highlights of the letter, which called attention to the fact that hisorical values were involved in the proposal (Thomas Jefferson himself, named many of the streets and avenues of Washington), cited the loss to business establishments in replacement of stationery alone and pointed out that only an act of Congress can alter street names in the "old city of Washington" where confusing duplications are not the issue.

The commission approved a proposal to extend Suitland parkway "to coordinate the District's future street system," and discussed enlargement of the Federal Triangle to include East Capitol st. as far as the Anacostia River. Both projects are part of postwar plans.

The parkway is to be broadened where it converges on Alabama ave. and 25th st. se., according to the plan. But this would entail no demolition of homes along that route, it was stated, since only "undeveloped" sections are involved in the extension.

Negro residents in the area last week expressed apprehension that a move to widen Suitland parkway might result in condemnation of their homes.

The commission also voted that a study be made of a recommendation by the Brightwood Citizens Association that the Emery estate at Georgia ave. and Madison and Concord sts. nw. be purchased for a recreation center. Decision on the matter will depend on two factors, the commission said: Cost and the need for a recreation center in that area. No funds now are available, it was pointed out.

Approval was also given plans for four playground shelters, to be constructed at a cost of $5000 each with Lanham Act funds to be made available by the Recreation Board.

John Ihlder, director of the National Capital Housing Association, is scheduled to meet with the commission today to discuss site plans for Negro housing projects east of the Anacostia River.

Dr. Perry

Hull's Doctor Tells About Moscow Trip

Thumb-nail impressions of personalities in the war picture were sketched verbally yesterday by Dr. Matthew W. Perry as he related for members of the North Washington Lions Club sidelights of the recent mission to Moscow on which he accompanied Secretary of State Hull as his personal physician.

Unable to reveal the itinerary of the air trip or its political implications, Dr. Perry instead told of the people he had observed during the conferences and celebration banquets which highlighted his first overseas voyage.

"Obviously a Leader"

Of Premier Stalin, whom he characterized as "obviously a leader," he said, "at the banquet which climaxed the mission, he quickly entered into the spirit of the occasion. His toasts were pithy and delightful, and he was clever in repartee."

A "most magnetic and marvelous personality" is the special attribute of General Eisenhower, according to Dr. Perry, who added, "after seeing the general, as a plain American, I come back feeling our boys are in mighty good hands."

"Our boys" themselves—Dr. Perry called their fighting spirit excellent. He noted that he was able to sense an American encampment before the Stars and Stripes were visible by the tip-top order in which U.S. bases are set up.

Russians Well Nourished

The Russian man-on-the-street is "a stolid individual," Dr. Perry acknowledged. "He merely wends his way and tends to his own business. You can't read very much in Russian faces."

He added, "Those people have given their all to this war. It's a very serious thing to them," but he said that the populace, at least in the cities visited, appear to be well nourished.

Secretary Hull seemed to gain the esteem of Russian officials immediately, his doctor declared. "His simplicity, straight-forwardness and profound grasp of the international situation sent the conference off to a satisfactory start," he said.

Fund Drive Ends Today; 88% Now In

The Community War Fund's final report meeting at noon today in the U. S. Chamber "Hall of Flags" will mark the end of a 1½-month-old campaign to raise $4,800,000 among Washingtonians. This fund is to be used to service three vital fronts growing out of wartime emergencies: USO and war hospitality work for our servicemen fighting the enemy, rehabilitation and relief for the Axis-stricken refugees of our Allies; and the homefront agencies caring for our underprivileged and needy.

As figures stood last night, however, a $572,093 gap still remained in achievement of the goal, with only $4,227,907, or 88.08 per cent of the total, contributed by this city.

Fund divisions, meanwhile, have been working overtime during the past week in a last-ditch effort to bridge the deficit and put the drive through successfully.

Greatest activity, according to Fund headquarters, has been shown by the Government and Metropolitan divisions. Yesterday was designated "Mission Accomplished Day," with every Government department called upon urgently to help raise the amount necessary to meet the full quota.

Metropolitan Washington's residents were canvassed so that persons who had not yet contributed could do so, and all calls were personally answered by volunteer workers.

Of the nearby county organizations representing Montgomery, Fairfax, Arlington and Prince Georges, Fairfax yesterday gave indications of coming closest to reaching 100 per cent of its quota.

The final reports which will be read today at the meeting represent the efforts of 19,000 volunteers in this 1944 Community War Fund drive.

D.C. Woman Claims Body as Husband's

New Orleans, Nov. 18 (AP).—Police announced today that Mrs. Theresa Mano, 507 E st. ne., Washington, D. C., had identified the body of a man found November 9 in a crude swampland grave here as that of her husband, Constantino Masotto, known as Gene Mano, French Market butcher.

Mrs. Mano, a brunette, arrived yesterday from Washington to aid police in solving the slaying. She told officers she sold his meat stall after his mysterious disappearance several weeks ago and went to the Capital City.

House Group To Consider 4 D. C. Bills

The House District Committee will meet in full session at 10 a. m. Monday for consideration of four local bills, Chairman Jennings Randolph announced yesterday.

Paramount in importance among the proposed bills is a "reorganization" measure introduced last spring by Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana granting the District Commissioners additional powers, including:

Authorization to waive fees for members of the armed forces for retention or renewal of business or professional licenses;

Adoption and enforcement of regulations requiring electrical companies, plumbers, gas fitters, air conditioners and refrigerating concerns to be bonded;

Renting of any District-owned property not then needed for the purpose for which it was originally acquired;

Granting revocable permits for construction of tunnels and laying of conduits and pipes;

Suspension without pay of any officer or employe appointed by them;

Naming or changing the name of any highway, bridge or other public place within their jurisdiction, after public hearing;

And assessing and collecting fees for copies of orders, regulations, permits, certificates and transcripts of records furnished by the District.

The other measures to be considered Monday would set the boundaries between the District and Virginia, eliminate servicemen's fees for reissuing of driver's permits, and grant the District Boxing Commission salaries of $1800 annually. The boxing measure, upon which Representative Harris of Arkansas will hold a subcommittee meeting at 10:30 a. m. today, also would provide that funds in excess of $10,000 accrued to the credit of the Boxing Commission be turned over to the District as miscellaneous revenue.

'Student Day' Trees Planted By Czechs at AU Ceremony

Vladimar Hurban, Czechoslovakian Ambassador, helps plant four linden trees—his land's national tree—in the soil of American University, in observing International Student Day. At left is Madame Hurban. The trees symbolized the spirit of international student freedom.

With the Czechoslovakian Ambassador and Madame Hurban turning the first earth, four short-leaf linden trees—national tree of that land—were planted yesterday in the soil of American University, symbolizing the unquenchable spirit of student freedom in the world.

REVILLIOD

Marking the fourth anniversary of International Student Day and of the Nazi slaughter of 150 University of Prague students November 17, 1939, the ceremony followed chapel services in Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church.

The American University choir surprised worshipers by singing "Where Is My Home?" the Czechoslovakian national anthem, in its native language, Dr. Joseph J. Weisskopf, Embassy medical attache, said he "coached" the singers with a phonetic translation of the anthem.

Dr. Horace E. Cromer, superintendent of the East Washington Methodist District, preached at the chapel services, and Dr. Paul F. Douglass, university president, presided.

Surprise visitor to the ceremonies was Pilot Officer Leonard Revilliod of the Canadian Royal Air Force. He is grandson of Thomas Masaryk, first President of Czechoslovakia and a nephew of Jan Masaryk, vice president and foreign minister of that country. The pilot is enjoying a furlough.

Freedom Symbolized

The trees symbolized the freedom to pursue knowledge and truth "unmolested by violence and unrestrained by prejudice"; freedom to think without punishment; freedom to conduct research unhampered by dogma, and freedom to express opinion.

Laverne Russell, Ruth Geran, Merrill Sickles and Miriam Bowman and student body president Glenn Riddell led the student participation. Among other guests were Robert Woods Bliss, former Ambassador to Argentina and a trustee of American University; Dr. Harry W. Burgan, chairman of the board, and members of the faculty. A buffet luncheon followed at Dr. Douglass' home.

City News in Brief

Margaret Ann Briggs, 12, of 3817 Georgia ave. nw., was admitted to Emergency Hospital yesterday suffering from first and second degree burns of the upper part of her body.

The girl's dress caught on fire while she was standing near the furnace in the basement of her home. Her aunt, Mrs. Leota Webdale, 51, of the Georgia ave. address, saved the girl by beating out the flames with her hands. Mrs. Webdale was treated at Emergency Hospital for first degree burns of a hand and wrist but was later released.

Attache Will Speak

Osborne Hauge of the staff of the Norwegian Embassy will talk on "The Struggle of the Norwegian Church Against Nazism" at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., tonight at 8:30. The forum is sponsored by the American Presbyterian Church.

Liberty Bell Session

Members of the Military Order of the Liberty Bell will assemble in Washington Saturday for the second annual convention of the order. Meetings will be held in the American Legion Building, 2437 15th st. nw., and the convention will close Monday with election of officers.

Canon Law Lecture

"The History of the Codification of Canon Law" will be the title of the lecture of Stephen Kuttner, J. U. D., professor of the History of Canon Law, in the St. Thomas More Library at Catholic University tonight at 8.

'Little Turkey Yet Found On Menus

Maybe it's just as well Thanksgivings have been rationed this year—there wasn't enough turkey on Washington markets for two celebrations anyway.

Those whose minds tend to the nostalgic took a few moments yesterday to remember the tradition-shattering early Thanksgiving celebrated by all except anti-New Dealers and, of course, the turkey populace, back in 1939.

They recalled it was designed to trick the Christmas shopping crowd into retail stores a week earlier, which, they agreed, was hardly necessary this year.

The early Thanksgiving lasted just three years, and in 1941 the President proclaimed an end to the innovation. In 1942, two Thanksgivings had gone the way of two chickens in every pot.

So Thanksgiving wasn't yesterday, but next Thursday, and most Washington restaurants had neither turkey nor any of the fixin's on their menus. At the predominantly New Deal Senate restaurant, there were hot turkey sandwiches with cranberry sauce, but it may have been a coincidence.

As a matter of fact, poultry dealers here doubt whether there will be any extensive gobbling of turkey next week either. The traditional holiday meat seems to be as scarce as a four-room apartment in Washington.

Slush Fund Use in D. C. Charged to Utility

Charges in a St. Louis court that company slush fund was used here to secure approval of the sliding scale for power rates yesterday brought from Gregory Hankin, minority PUC member, the assertion that the scale resulted in the Potomac Electric Co. earning 65 per cent a year on its common stock.

The slush fund charges were made in St. Louis, Mo., by Frank J. Boehm, former executive vice president of the Union Electric Co. of Missouri, against the North American Co., large Pepco stockholder.

Accusations Made in Suit

The accusations were made in the course of a suit for $3,500,000 damages against the North American Co. Boehm had previously served a two-year sentence in jail after conviction on a perjury charge before the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The petition asserted that in the District of Columbia where transportation and electric facilities were controlled by North American the funds were used "to obtain favorable construction from the Public Utilities Commissioners of the sliding scale agreement between the city of Washington and the Potomac Electric Power Co. and to influence the appointment of Public Utilities Commissioners."

"Kickbacks" Charged

Boehm said the fund was raised by forcing kickbacks from contractors employed, salary kickbacks from officials and that officials were required to pad expense accounts to increase the fund.

James H. Flanagan, chairman of the local commission, said that he had no statement to make at this time as the sliding scale agreement was entered into back in the 1920's.

Asked for comment Hankin said:

"I have no statement to make regarding the assertions contained in the Boehm suit.

"However, for myself I would refer you to the following:

"(1) The language of the anti-merger law makes it unlawful for any holding corporation, directly and indirectly to own, control, hold or vote stock or bonds of any public utility corporation in the District except as heretofore or hereafter authorized by Congress.

"It makes it unlawful for any District utility corporation to sell or transfer any portion of its stock or bonds to any holding company and every contract, transfer, agreement of transfer or assignment of any such stock or bonds, without express congressional authority is 'entirely void and of no effect'."

"(2) As to my view on the acquisitions of the North American Co., in the local utilities I refer you to my opinion in the case in which the Potomac Electric Co. was permitted to sell its shares of stock to the Washington Railway & Electric Co., at $100 a share when the value of the stock was in excess of $600 a share. I regarded that as being in the nature of a stock dividend, prohibited by our statute.

"In that opinion I indicated that I view the holdings of the North American Co. in the local utilities, together with the dividends it received, less the price paid for its securities, as being held in trust for the people of the District of Columbia.

"(3) As to my view concerning the so-called sliding scale arrangement and the question you now raise, I refer you to my opinion, issued last April, in which I came to the conclusion that there had been gross neglect in the application of our law and that rates should have been reduced by approximately five million dollars rather than the $310,000 as ordered by the Commissioners.

Significance Cited

"It is significant that since the adoption of the sliding scale arrangement the Potomac Electric Co., which is subsidiary of the North American Co., has, since that time, declared dividends as high as 65 per cent per year, and at the same time increased its earned surplus some 25 million dollars.

"This is a bare outline. Of course you will find the full details in the opinion to which I refer you."

In additon to charging use of the alleged five million dollar slush fund in the District, Boehm said money also was used to further political aims of the company, in Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, California and Missouri.

Boehm also asserted that the perjury of which he was convicted had been ordered by superior officials.

Tablet Unveiled In Memory of Dr. Z. T. Phillips

The Christian virtues of the late Very Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips were extolled yesterday at the Washington Cathedral, where a memorial tablet was unveiled in his memory in the chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea.

Dr. Phillips, who died in 1942, was formerly rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church, chaplain of the Senate and dean of Washington Cathedral and chairman of the Episcopal House of Deputies for five sessions.

Leading tributes to his close friend, the Rt. Rev. Noble C. Powell, Bishop of Maryland, told the assemblage of worshipers:

"Against the background of our common humanity we find the life of ZeBarney T. Phillips to be good and we would know such goodness."

Among other participants in the service were Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, present rector of Epiphany Church; Canon Chancellor Charles W. F. Smith; Acting Canon Precentor W. Curtis Draper, jr., and the Rt. Rev. Walter H. Gray.

POST DISCOVERIES—

Sugar and Spice

Like cake without frosting—gingerbread without spice—is a dress without accessories. A good cook knows that just a pinch of seasoning will "make" a dish. And that's true of fashion.

The spice for your costume may be a scarf, a pin, a hat. Whatever it is, it's your chance to be original, to wear last year's clothes with an air, to add just the right bit of fancy for evenings when you want to look as feminine (and inefficient) as possible.

We've found some that do just that.

There's a little velvet cap that sits on the back of your head—and is partial to either the flat hairdo or a pompadour. You could wear it as is, but its possibilities are exciting! Tack a yard of veil to the back and let it fall to your shoulders; pin a large fluff of feathers in the front; sew a spray of sequins in the center. Any one of these is easy enough to do, and you couldn't find a more flattering bit of nonsense. Around $3.

It's not true that you have to sacrifice comfort for beauty. For those evenings when catching a bus to a party becomes a grim reality you can button this hand knitted scarf under your chin and keep as warm and look as pretty as the ads say you will. A row of multi-colored flowers circles the top and the tiniest gold thread is woven through the fine wool. Around $9 and for what it can do for your morale it's worth it!

Something unique in costume jewelry is a cute turtle and earrings to match. The colors are striking—black with red and gold. For the earrings the turtle has poked his head in and turned his back. The set for around $3.

For an upswept hairdo, combs are a necessity. But they can also be ornamental. The prettiest ones we've seen are made of crystal and have tiny rows of rhinestones on each scallop. Around $2. You can also get a set of combs each with a sparkling stone. These are unique in that there's a metal clasp that holds the comb securely to your head. $1 for a pair.

The lady in the butterfly headpiece has on the most original and creative bit of fantasy. The butterfly is made of velvet and feathers and is attached to a comb. From this swirls a cloud of black veil and dotted here and there are bits of feathers with centers of velvet. It's especially striking in fuchsia and black. Around $10.

Something new in pin and earring sets are zodiac pins. They're made of a plastic material in soft colors against a vivid background. They disclose the month you were born in—but they're gay enough to lie about your age. Around $3 for the set.

If you like to add or subtract your glitter from your costume, here's a simple way. You can get a Juliet cap with sequin scrolls over net. It's particularly useful when you want to stand out in a crowd—the light catches every tiny sequin and causes it to blaze out like prewar Broadway. Around $3.

Riverdale Women To See Film Called 'Crime Doesn't Pay'

George R. Hammond of the American Automobile Association will address the Woman's Club of Riverdale, Md., next Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Milton D. Campbell, 4706 Oliver st. In connection with his lecture he will show a sound motion picture film from the series entitled "Crime Doesn't Pay."

The program was arranged by Mrs. Arthur Charron, chairman of the program committee. Mrs. A. S. Thurston, president of the club, will preside. Other officers are: Vice president, Mrs. Brice Bowie; recording secretary, Mrs. L. M. Robbins; corresponding secretary, Mrs. D. J. Hilferty; treasurer, Mrs. Ernest Gelinas; director, Mrs. Peter Duguid.

The assisting hosesses will be Mrs. J. S. Caldwell, Mrs. Katherine C. Chappell, Mrs. T. Norman Claytor, Mrs. J. H. Baines, Mrs. A. Lee Amos and Mrs. W. W. Chambers.

The Shabby Season

CATCHING sight of yourself in the hall mirror, you decide that you don't look so bad after all. Your fur jacket really is as good as new—no one could tell it was three years old—your two-year-old suit is really better material than you could get now, and your hat that the little woman around the corner made over is as smart as any you see in the stores. It's amazing what you can do with old clothes when you have to.

Besides no one else will be dressed up. Haven't you been reading everywhere that it's chic to be shabby, that American women at last are patching and darning and making over and wearing old clothes with as much zest as the British? Well, it was certainly time that the long-predicted shabby season set in; time that the rags-are-royal-raiment era that had been reported to be on the way since Pearl Harbor actually arrived. How wonderful that at last women in this country were to be free from the slavery of dress competition, that they were to forget lapel ornaments and "darling" little suits, and the eternal search for blouses and nylon stockings, and to get down to the simple, fundamental values of life!

THE USUAL shrill stacc to din greets you as you enter. You give your jacket to the maid just as she finishes hanging up the bright new Chesterfield of the woman ahead. A woman beside you waits with a dashing new black officers' coat. The racks contain an array of luxurious fur wraps.

You pause at the door looking for your hostess—finally recognize her in her new upswept pompadour and a black glitter afternoon dress. "So nice to see you!" she gurgles with her eyes on the woman behind you . . . Again the refrain, "So nice to see you!" then the whispered exchange, "It's perfectly stunning!" . . . "So glad you like it." You turn to face Adele Trott in a spectacular feathered turban and a new black form-fitting crepe dress. Suddenly your last year's best black at home seems as big as a Mother Hubbard and as shapeless.

Natalie Twitter breezes up in a new little fur-trimmed ensemble. "What a darling suit!" you hear everyone exclaiming. "Don't you love the new short jackets?" Suzanne Preen remarks to you. You are suddenly conscious of your own extending well below the L-85 ruling. You feel like a zoot suiter as you see her eyes travel over you appraisingly.

"Who is the woman in the stunning sequin hat?" you start to ask, then realize it is Marjorie Steppit. Why the last time you saw Marjorie it was downtown, and she said she wasn't going to buy another thing through the duration. "Look at Elaine Dither keeping on her new mink swagger in this hot room" continues Suzanne. "She's pretending she's rushing on to another party."

Other women everywhere are exchanging compliments over fur coats, "little" suits, "darling" dresses and "stunning" hats. Everywhere the echoes, "I bought it for the duration" . . . "Yes, you can't tell how long it'll be" . . . "Oh, I just picked it up to be on the safe side."

YOU BEGIN to feel like a drab shadow. Your suit which seemed so trim and fresh when you looked in the hall mirror, has taken on that indefinable anemic air that last year's garments so often possess. Your hat in some subtle way shows that it is a pariah among the other headgear. You feel your body slumping, your mind dulling.

Now that is silly, you tell yourself. Think of the British women! Aren't even the duchesses glorying in wearing their old clothes? Isn't Princess Elizabeth wearing last year's evening dress? What is the matter with you anyway that you are so superficial and vulgar in your standards? After all, you are neat and genteel—still you don't want to be neat and genteel . . . Well then you are patriotic, a lot more patriotic than these women flouncing around in their glitter and furs. That's it! You're a patriot! And you ought to be holding up your head and wearing your old clothes with a great air. That's just what you'll do! You'll rise above the situation, above all this superficiality—that is, a little later . . just as soon as you get to feeling a little stronger. Right now you are suddenly very tired and . . . and maybe it might be a good idea to go home a little early . . . so you can check out your old fur jacket before too many people are around looking you over.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

How are children to learn the values of our possessions if they are theirs to destroy at will?

It's clear enough that it is only through the penalties a child suffers when he uses the beds or davenport as spring boards, or the newly-waxed floors as a skating rink, that he discovers these are for the use of the whole family and not as playthings for the children.

Mrs. C. H. F. says this question has been argued by herself and sister-in-law who thinks she wants no furniture in her house which her children cannot play with or on. "I differ with her," she writes. "If children play outdoors a large portion of the day I think they can play quiet games in the house. That is for the peace of the household as well as discipline for them. I want my children to admire and appreciate nice things we own and how will they unless they learn to do this as children?"

Your sister-in-law is a sentimentalist, but she hasn't thought through this particular subject very clearly. She wants her children to be welcome in the home of others. She wants them, I hope, to preserve and not destroy their own family treasures. How can they be trusted in public buildings, in schools, in impersonal apartment houses if they have never learned at home that their desires to play cannot be satisfied with the cherished possessions of others?

Every child should have his own toys and should learn from the moment he is toddling around the house, that while he can use—as others do—the objects he sees around him, they have their special uses and are not intended for toys.

Children pick up these habits as easily as habits of indifference and destruction toward the objects around them. It is the evaluation we put upon our possessions which gives the child respect for them, or our own indifference, or sentimental indulgence of them, which makes them act like hoodlums in their own homes. That would be poor education, to my notion.

Our leaflet, "Destructive Tendencies," discusses why some children are more destructive than others. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Not a Pretty Story Is the Tale of Europe's Children

By Martha Rhyne

Hers wasn't the usual story you hear over cocktails—but it was an opportunity for her hostess, Mme. Toivola, wife of the Counselor of the Finnish Legation, and her guests yesterday to hear the gripping tales of starving Europe from Therese Bonney, whose photographs and verbal captions depict tragedy.

Therese Bonney knows her subject—the cruel "To Whom the Wars Are Done," a name which she gave an exhibit of her photographs of the Russo-Finnish War and other European conflagrations shown here in the Library of Congress in the fall of 1941. She knows of the Spanish aristocrats who worked side by side with peasant girls during the Spanish upheaval; she saw Portuguese women tenderly care for stranded refugees; she saw the French struggle against a merciless foe and fight in stoical little ways after the disgraceful armistice; she is familiar with the work of women in neutral countries, as Switzerland and Sweden. Her strong, stern face reflects the seriousness of what she has seen and the purpose with which she proposes to do something about it.

It was in 1938 that she sailed for Finland because she had a "hunch" trouble would break out there, the native country of Mme. Toivola, who entertained at her Woodley pl. home yesterday afternoon from 6 to 8 for the famed feminine exponent of the Richard Harding Davis brand of journalism. She's always played those hunches and she's been right throughout—she took "on-the-spot" coverage seriously.

A Californian, the hardy photographer, who looks capable of guerilla warfare or anything else she might set out to do, lived since the last war in peaceful Paris. Her business was syndicating pictures. The war in Finland found her there making pictures of Finland's everyday life. Playing the hunch again, she went to Belgium and made more "before" pictures—she didn't have to wait long for the Nazis. Then to France—and again the Nazis.

But the hundreds who heard her lecture Wednesday at the Chamber of Commerce Hall of Flags realized that she had given up the sensationalism of war photography for her crusade for hungry European children. Comfortable, well-fed Washington was startled into the realization that the problem is great. Her pictures, the work of a skilled photographer, and her speech, carefully chosen words of a woman who knows how to sway emotions, bore out Father Edmond Walsh's introductory warning that "An empty stomach has no concern for the sanctity of private property."

Bette Hinman Weds William Arnold

Breaking the news of their marriage to their friends are William Arnold and the former Bette Ellen McClaskey Hinman, who slipped off to Rockville, Md., to become Mr. and Mrs. on Wednesday, November 10. Following the ceremony there was a wedding dinner at the Statler Hotel in Washington, with Senator George L. Radcliffe, Senator Kenneth McKellar and Carmen Cavellaro, the orchestra leader, among the guests.

Mrs. Arnold is now in New York and Mr. Arnold off on a brief inspection trip of one of the plants where he makes powdered milk for lend-lease.

They will spend the weekend at Mr. Arnold's estate at McLean, Va.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lacey McClaskey of Great Neck, Long Island, formerly of Kentucky. She attended school in Washington. Mr. Arnold was married to Mrs. Kim Moran in April, 1942, and was divorced in July of the same year.

Wives of Fighting Generals Earn—and Hold—Their Share of Spotlight on the 'Fireside Front'

TIME WAS—when wives of high-ranking Army officers never dared open their mouths on subjects of public interest in time of war. While their husbands ran the show on the fighting front, they stayed home, minded the children and steadfastly declined to let anybody know they had opinions . . . and could express them.

But it's a different story this war. The minute a general chalks up a victory on the battlefield the spotlight turns on the little woman back home. She is besieged with invitations to speak on the radio, on the across-country lecture platform and before countless women's clubs. In a word, she too becomes a "public figure," basking in the aura of fame that surrounds her husband . . . and she takes it in her stride.

Mrs. James Doolittle's life has been one public appearance after another—over the radio, at big-league gatherings here, there and everywhere—ever since her husband dropped those historic bombs on Tokyo. Rumors are going the usual rounds that Mrs. Mark Clark soon will be off on a lecture tour. Mrs. Ike Eisenhower never has a moment to herself any more, and although I believe she hasn't yet elected to take to the platform, plenty of opportunity along that line has come her way . . . and she has given her share of interviews the past few months.

MRS. GEORGE S. PATTON, jr., who so far as I can remember was fairly press-shy back in prewar days, now finds her name in print frequently. Sometimes it gets there by way of an interview; sometimes by report of a speech, such as the one she made the other day in New York at a benefit luncheon for the Masters School Day Nursery.

I'm sure America's beloved General Patton ("Blood and Guts") would have been especially proud of that speech, for his wife managed to put across some of his own pet theories about the training of youth. She said, for example, that every boy who comes out of high school in this country should have one year of military training. "It makes for disciplined character," she went on. "And it makes good Americans out of all sorts of odds and ends."

From then on, most of her remarks were directed to young wives of soldiers. Having moved with her husband and family from one military post to another over a period of many years, Mrs. Patton knows well problems of an Army wife, and also the solutions.

THE ARMY WIFE, she believes, is a living example of the theory that "hope springs eternal," because even though she won't stay put very long at a time, she still spends as much time as the average wife poring over seed catalogues, planning gardens, and looking forward to the day when she can have a home of her own.

"Yet we Army wives actually set our watches by bugles all our lives . . . and carry our home life with us as a turtle does its shell," she said.

What about the children in an Army household? Well, Mrs. Patton's speech touched on them, too. She said time and time again she had been asked how she managed to rear her children in the unsettled atmosphere of an Army post. But she managed all right, as Army wives usually do—even though she once was faced with the problem of turning a Pullman car into a practical nursery, which she conducted not only for the benefit of her own children but also for those of several other Army wives.

Mrs. Patton talks well. She is witty and wise, and she has quite a flair for seasoning her speeches with original phrases. And she writes as skillfully as she talks. Her first book, "Blood of the Shark," a historic novel giving much of the legendary background of the Hawaiian Islands, was widely acclaimed. She has written several others, and also some magazine pieces.

Shortly before she returned to Washington the other day, her daughter, Ruth Ellen, telephoned her in New York to say: "Brace yourself, mother. I'm calling to tell you, you've made True Story Magazine!"

NOW IT CAN be told . . . for at last the date has been cided for that gala opening of the Navy League's new headquarters at 1640-44 21st. st. It's to be Thanksgiving Day, with a schedule calling for an open house from 3 to 10 p. m., and a reception from 5:30 to 7:30.

Around 1700 invitations will go out for the opening, and blanket bids are being issued to all officers from the rank of commander on up—and that takes in the Coast Guard and the Marines as well as the Navy. Gold-braided admirals will be all over the place, of course; and in wartime or any other that's enough to guarantee a top-drawer Washington party of more than passing importance.

The new Navy League home, by the way, was three houses not so long ago. William Wadsworth Wood purchased the trio and turned it into the headquarters that many Washingtonians will see for the first time on Thanksgiving Day.

TWO NEW members of the New Zealand Joint Staff Mission will be feted this evening from 6 to 8 o'clock at the New Zealand Legation. They are Air Commodore James Findlay, M. C., newly named head of the mission, and Comdr. Bernard T. Giles, naval member of the same contingent.

Hosts will be the New Zealand Charge d'Affaires and Mrs. Geofrey S. Cox, who are officiating in the continued absence of the New Zealand Minister and Mrs. Walter Nash.

Standing in the receiving line with the two honor guests will be their wives, and also the departing member of the mission, Group Capt. John Seabrook, who has been here for some time as representative of the Royal New Zealand Air Force. He will be off soon for duty in his homeland.

Newspaper Club to Honor 'Teddy Bear'

The American Newspaper Women's Club has sent out amusing brown paper invitations in the form of a teddy bear for a tea on Sunday at the clubhouse. The fete is in honor of Cartoonist Clifford Berryman's teddy bear, who will be 41 years old that day. Mr. Berryman began his career as newspaper cartoonist on The Washington Post.

In order to avoid "crushing teddy," the invitation reads, the hours will be staggered, with various groups of guests invited for different hours.

J. H. Hills Now House Hunting In Capital

Col. and Mrs. J. Huntington Hills are house-hunting again. Colonel and Mrs. Hills, who left Washington a year and a half ago for station in Fort Worth, Tex., returned just a few days ago for station here again, much to the delight of their many friends in the Capital.

During their previous tour here, they made their home at the Dresden Apartment, and though they hoped to find an apartment of similar size when they returned they have discovered, as have others in wartime Washington, that one takes what one can get, if one can get it. So they have sent out an SOS to all their friends and hope to be located soon.

In the meantime, Mrs. Hills' father and mother, Maj. Gen. Edward A. Kreger, former Judge Advocate General of the Army, and Mrs. Kreger, have remained in Fort Worth with Col. and Mrs. Hills' two daughters and small granddaughter.

The youngest daughter, now 12, is Vera Huntington Hills, named for both her mother and father. The elder daughter, now Mrs. R. J. Culhane, with her 7-month-old baby, Barbara Ann, will make her home with her parents for the duration. Her husband is a captain in the Infantry, U. S. Army.

Grand Opera Group Names Charter Members

Taking a city-wide community aspect, the Washington Grand Opera Association today releases the names of several prominent Washingtonians who have recently become charter members of the association.

Among those on the list are Ambassador and Senora de Escalante of Venezuela, Minister and Mrs. P. Zadeskis of Lithuania, Minister and Mme. Hassan of Egypt, Senor and Senora de Azevedo of Brazil, Mrs. Lawrence Allnut, Leslie Ashburn, Miss Edith Asher, Mrs. W. L. Barber, Mrs. John Barrow, Mrs. R. Bratt, Mrs. Hailen M. Chapman, Mrs. H. I. Crockett, Mr. R. W. Comstock and Miss Agusta Conrad.

Also Miss Mildred D. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Donavan, Edward W. Donn, jr., Mrs. Rozier H. Dulaney, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Edward Foley, jr., Mrs. W. H. Fulton and Mrs. V. L. Gregg, chairman of the Washington Grand Opera Association in Arlington.

The initial offering of the association at Constitution Hall will be on December 8, when the great Giovanni Martinelli will appear in the role in "Pagliacci." Also to be presented at the opening performance will be "Cavalleria Rusticana," with Sidney Rayner and Elda Ercole in the leading roles.

The other two operas to be presented during the current season will be "La Traviata" on January 25 and on February 24 the association will offer "La Boheme." Metropolitan Opera stars will sing the leading roles in both performances.

Tickets are now available at the Washington Grand Opera offices at 1719 19th st., and also at the box offices at the Willard and Shoreham Hotels.

Venezuelan Poet, Visitor Here, Is Also Noted as Statesman

A new arrival in Washington is Andres Eloy Blanco, Venezuelan statesman and one of the foremost poets of his country, who has come to the United States as a guest of the Department of State. A representative for Caracas in the Chamber of Deputies of Venezuela, Senor Blanco is one of the champions of democracy in his country and vice president of the political party "Accion Democratica" of which—by a strange coincidence—another talented writer, Romulo Gallego, the author of the famous novel "Dona Barbara," is president.

Asked during a recent interview at the Pan American Union how he happened to have drifted from literature into politics, Senor Blanco gave the fact that he had been a political prisoner for four years under the late President Gomez' administration as that which led him almost unwillingly "into standing up for liberty in a country that seemed to have lost it."

"Today, however," the distinguished Venezuelan added, "although I am still a leader in an opposition party, I am proud to say that our present government is one that truly practices democratic ideals and that is cooperating full-heartedly with the United Nations." According to Senor Blanco there is not a drop of Venezuelan oil sold to any but the Allied powers, and the fact that their production is virtually "keeping the RAF flying" is a motive of great satisfaction to the people of his country.

Turning to the literary field, Eloy Blanco confided that he was preparing a new volume of verse, "La Juanbimbada," a series of popular poems to the glories and the hardships of the Venezuelan people. The title of the book comes from the word Juanbimba, a name given by the poet to the oppressed and which has become so popular in Venezuela that it now stands as a symbol of underprivileged and hard-suffering people and places in his country.

Dr. Blanco plans to be in the United States for about six weeks, lecturing mostly on topics connected with Venezuelan and Latin-American life and literature. The first one of these series of lectures will take place at the Pan American Union on Tuesday evening, November 23, when he will speak in Spanish on "Venezuelan Poets and Intellectual Responsibility in Venezuela."

Schildkraut to Tell Schoolgirls Of Theater Life

It's a gala day out at Mount Vernon Seminary, for the great Joseph Schildkraut, appearing currently at the National in "Uncle Harry," is coming out to the school assembly this afternoon to tell the students some of his stage and theater reminiscences. And it came about because Mme. Julia Elbogen, head of the music department of the school, knew Mr. Schildkraut in Vienna, begged him to come out and he promptly accepted.

Members of the faculty are attending assembly, and Mrs. Herbert L. Willett, jr., treasurer of the board of trustees; Mrs. Ralph Frederick Gow, newly elected member, who with her husband, Commander Gow, is now living in Belle Haven, Alexandria; Miss Elsie M. Foerderer, of Philadelphia, who came down to preside at the board meeting, and Mrs. R. Sanford Riley, attending the meeting from her home in Worcester, Mass., all say they would rather hear Mr. Schildkraut speak informally than see the play.

Mrs. Greenhut Fischer and her daughter have left for Orlando, Fla., to join Sergeant Fischer, who is stationed there. Mrs. Fischer's mother, Mrs. David Baer, is with them for a visit.

Czech Envoy And Mme. Hurban Luncheon Guests

The Ambassador of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban were the guests of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, at his residence on the campus.

Prior to the luncheon ceremonies took place on the campus marking the International Student Day in Washington. The observance centered officially around the Czechoslovak Embassy because the day was established following the massacre of 165 students on the steps of the University of Prague. At the morning ceremonies four linden trees were planted on the campus of American University, trees representing the four freedoms of student life. One, freedom to pursue knowledge and truth; two, freedom to think; three, freedom to conduct research, and four, freedom to express opinions.

Among those attending the luncheon were Robert Woods Bliss, Dr. Philip Marshall Brown, president of the American Peace Society, and Prof. A. B. Poyorf, dean of religion.

'The Case of the Army-Navy Generals,' or Just Another Business of 'Cherchez La Femme'

List of Annapolis Graduates Fill Army Rosters

By Elizabeth Henney

If you want to know why the "General" list of the Army is so well filled with graduates of the United States Naval Academy, it's just the good old business of "Cherchez la femme."

Of course, you can't get many of the officers themselves to admit that. They will hem-and-haw and allow as how they really were "awfully fond of the Coast Artillery all along anyway, and so it seemed the thing to do;" or else, as one officer did—they will say with a wicked twinkle in the eye, "You see, we just weren't good enough for the Navy, which is a direct reflection on the United States Military Academy so you'd better not quote it."

But the actual fact of the matter, in nine cases out of ten, and maybe the ten'h, too, is that—in the Navy (at least until the war started) a graduate had to wait for two years because of Navy regulations before he could marry that OAO (one and only) girl.

Army Wife Spills the Beans; 'It's Cupid's Fault'

Mrs. Campbell Met Husband There

And that, says Mrs. Levin H. Campbell, jr., wife of Major General Campbell, now Chief of the Ordnance of the United States Army (and a graduate of the United States Naval Academy of the class of 1909), is what brought a large group of young officers down to Fortress Monroe, Virginia; where she, an army daughter whose father was stationed there, met young Lieutenant Campbell, who had transferred, it seems, because of another young charmer.

Another one of the generals chimed in at that point to add that even if they had waited the two years, it was a heck of a life according to his way of thinking, with papa at sea most of the time and mama home alone.

But be that as it may, the Army has been greatly benefited by whatever reason it was that brought so many fine officers into the service.

It was the class of 1909 apparently, of the Naval Academy, that started the fashion of transferring. And it was one of the young members of that class who made a brilliant record in the First World War. Joseph Sumpter Harris—his name—was from Monticello, Ark., and he became a brigadier general in 1918, one of the youngest in the Army. Afterward he served as adjutant general of the State of Arkansas and died within a few years after the war.

List of Army-Navy Generals Long

The roster of Army-Navy generals in this war, however, is long and impressive. There is, for example, General Campbell, whose assistant is a former classmate, Brig. Gen. Julian S. Hatcher, Chief of the Field Service of the Ordnance.

Then there is Maj. Gen. Follett Bradley of the class of 1910, who is now serving with the Air Corps; Brig. Gen. Thomas H. Jones of the Coast Artillery; Maj. Gen. John E. Sloan, a division commander; Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, class of 1911, of the Air Corps; Maj. Gen. George R. Meyer, class of 1910, of the Coast Artillery, and Brig. Gen. Vincent Meyer, class of 1910 also, of the Field Artillery.

Navy Secretary To Open Naval Art Exhibition

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox will formally open the exhibition of naval aviation paintings at the National Gallery this Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

At the same time the entire collection of the 101 paintings will be presented to him by the Abbott Laboratories for the Navy's permanent collection. Vice Admiral John S. McCain, deputy chief of Naval Operations for Air, and other Navy officials will be present.

The paintings, covering pre-flight training through to combat operations in the Pacific area and executed by seven noted American artists, will be seen at New York's Metropolitan Museum and other museums throughout the country following the close of the exhibition in Washington on December 12.

Purely Personal

The Latvian Minister and Mme. Bilmanis entertained at tea yesterday, in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of Latvian independence. Latvian residents in the District were their guests.

Senator Miguel de Echegaray, Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy, and Senora de Echegaray are in New York at the Ritz-Carlton.

Palmer Hoyt, head of the domestic branch of OWI, and Mrs. Hoyt will go to New York tomorrow to spend several days. They will return the middle of next week.

Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck entertained a small group of guests at tea yesterday afternoon for her mother, Mrs. Newton R. Barkolow, who is visiting Dr. and Mrs. Hornbeck from her home in Denver. Mrs. Barkolow will be here until after Christmas.

Mrs. George F. Fox 3d, wife of Lieut. Fox, arrived yesterday from Wilmington, Del., to visit her parents, Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell, jr., chief of ordnance, and Mrs. Campbell.

Rector Will Be Honored at Tea

The Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, newly inaugurated rector of the Catholic University of America, will be guest of honor and will receive with Msgr. Edward L. Buckey and the board of managers of the Catholic Home for Aged Ladies at a donation tea to be held Tuesday, November 30. The fete will take place at the home, 3046 P st., from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Assisting Monsignor Buckey will be Mrs. Frank W. Hill, board president; Mrs. David Hayes, Mrs. George May and Miss Helen Shea. Others working in behalf of the tea are Miss May Blandford, Miss May Fenwick, Miss Orline Fenwick, Mrs. Laurence A. Baldwin, Mrs. Gwynn Gardiner, Miss Isabel Johnson, Mrs. Craig King, Mrs. Paul May, Mrs. Louis Peak and Miss Elizabeth Pace.

Egyptian Envoy Host at Dinner

The Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan entertained at dinner last evening at the legation.

Their guests included the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei, the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Casey, the Naval Attache of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Angelin, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik and Mr. and Mrs. Walter White.

Engracia Freyer Becomes Bride

Of interest to Washington is the marriage of Miss Engracia Enriqueta Critcher Freyer, daughter of Capt. Frank Barrows Freyer, USN, and Mrs. Freyer, to William Andrew Dougherty of New York, son of Mrs. William A. Dougherty, of Cairo, Ill., and the late Mr. Dougherty. The ceremony took place in New York on Saturday, November 13, in Christ Methodist Episcopal Church.

Captain and Mrs. Freyer, who now live in Denver, Colo., made their home in Washington for a number of years. Their daughter attended the Warrenton Country School and made her debut in Washington. She is a member of the Junior League and a former member of the Spinsters Club of San Francisco.

Mr. Dougherty was graduated from Ohio State University and is president of the Ohio Society of New York. He and his first wife, the former Miss Ruth Sprankle, were divorced.

Miss Ida Jean Kain, known to many readers through her column featured on the woman's page, is in Washington to be guest speaker at an exhibit sponsored by the Consumer Nutrition Committee, War Service Division, and the District of Columbia Department, American Federation of Government Employes. As shown above, she is an example of her own teachings—verve and spontaneity through proper nutrition and exercise.

Get Into 'Shape' for War Work By Proper Diet, Advises Ida Jean Kain

Ida Jean Kain, health and figure expert, is a visitor in Washington to tell homemakers and Government women it is just as important for them to keep fit as it is for the soldiers on combat duty.

This dynamic little nutritionist is here as guest speaker for the private opening of an exhibit on Food in War and Peace. "Get Into Shape" will be the theme of her talk tonight at this exhibit being sponsored by the War Service Division, Consumer Nutrition Committee and District of Columbia, American Federation of Government Employes. This showing is in the interest of Food for Health, Food for Victory, Food to Build the Peace.

Miss Kain, who is the personification of the advice she gives in her daily column in The Washington Post, is going to tell her audience tonight how proper eating can produce buoyant health, a supple attractive figure and spontaneity.

"The homemaker and Government women are making their contribution to war activity without fanfare," said Miss Kain yesterday on her arrival from New York.

"Women at home are the real front," she continued. "They must keep fit to be able to accomplish all the work that is necessary to see the war to a successful end. Many women are not only carrying on war work outside the home, but are putting in long hours to keep their homes running efficiently.

"Unfortunately many persons have the idea that potatoes are fattening, so they won't eat this worthy vegetable. Since potatoes have about 100 calories per average portion, and chocolate cake has more than 400 calories per average portion, they will pass up the potatoes in favor of chocolate cake.

"Just because foods are rationed and require points is no excuse that persons cannot eat intelligently. They can eat correctly and keep 'in shape' too if they will give consideration to their diets.

"The working girl doesn't always have the proper respect for nutrition. If her curves are on the plump side she gets the notion that balanced meals are fattening and she isn't having any. Good nutrition keeps you fit—not fat. The girls who are thin as skim milk blame the whole thing on the high cost of living. They can't afford good food and good clothes, so they take the clothes. But the less money they have to spend on food the more important the choice.

"This is war. We can't stand up under the strain of war without good food, and the girl who tries to do so can't do her best work. If she gives the best years of her life to malnutrition she will grow old in a hurry. And girls, it won't help you to catch a well-balanced meal ticket.

"Talking to a soldier on the train en route to Washington from New York, just back from Sicily, he told me that Americans can be mighty proud of the Yanks. The only way we can lose this war is for the home front to fall down on the job. It appalls returning soldiers to see the waste of food in eating places."

Miss Kain tells in a future column about Mrs. Roosevelt going on a diet and so reduced 30 pounds. This was accomplished by a 1000 calorie, balanced, daily diet, plus a vitamin concentrate—and willpower.

Col. Paul P. Logan, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army and James B. Born, national president, AFGE, are also to be speakers tonight on the program given at the Washington Gas Light Auditorium. Mrs. Frederick W. Witt, nationally known economist, chairman, Consumer Nutrition Committee, who is working so diligently in the interest of food in the war effort, has as her vice-chairman, that capable, well-known home economist, Miss Mary I. Barber, who was loaned to the Government by the Kellogg Company, for a few months. But she has stayed on for more than two and a half years so that she can help to plan adequate rations for our fighting men.

BLANKET LIFE: A LONG STORY

A blanket stays clean longer if you turn the top sheet back over the blanket top from eight to twelve inches. If the sheet is too short, baste a strip of cloth across the blanket top.

Putting a third sheet over woolen bedding will keep dust from collecting there during the night. Keeps you warm, too, for it holds still air in the fluffy wool.

Correction

The Post regrets the error in the omission of ¾ teaspoon soda in the eggless chocolate cake given yesterday in Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter.

Vitamin 'Normalizer' Corrects Underweight and Irritability

By Ida Jean Kain

If you are a too-thin girl with a finicky appetite, the chances are you are not getting enough vitamin B1. You probably don't eat enough to get your share of this vitamin. But, so as not to frighten the overweights, let me point out that vitamin B1 is an appetite normalizer. It doesn't make you ravenous.

A poor appetite is only one of several signs of a vitamin B1 deficiency. Others are impaired digestion, constipaton, irritability, and other symptoms of nervousness, and loss of weight and vitality.

Nutritionists and doctors agree that food is the cheapest and best source of any vitamin because it furnishes so many other essentials. But with a lagging appetite, the doctor will often suggest one or two tablets, one milligram each, of pure vitamin B1 (or, thiamin, which is the scientific term) per day, to be taken before or with meals. Later, when your appetite has picked up, the additional vitamin B can be taken in the form of wheat germ cooked with a whole grain breakfast cereal, or in dried brewer's yeast tablets, which are classed as food.

The use of these special sources will give you a keener appreciation of food in a short time. You will enjoy a big bowl of cereal and milk with cream for breakfast every morning—something too hearty to bear thinking about before! And you will soon be able to add a slice of toast and even an egg to that meal.

The fix you are in is just opposite of that of the overweight. She needs to shrink her stomach and you want to increase your food capacity. You do it gradually, by taking a little more food at each meal. Until you have a good capacity, have a glass of milk or an egg nogg in the mid-morning and mid-afternoon. This is an excellent idea for any thin girl who finds herself too tired to eat by mealtime.

If you are the average thin girl, you should step up your calories by about 500 a day. That gives you a reserve to be stored as fat. Because of your uncertain stomach, it is important to get these calories in a form that doesn't tax your digestive system. Milk, the various milk beverages, and cream soups are particularly good in your menus. They go down more easily than solids and you can get a surprising number of calories in them—especially in the malt, or chocolate preparations.

Another gaining measure is to take 1 teaspoonful of codliver oil a day for extra calories and vitamins A and D which help greatly in building up resistance.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Those Who Want or Need Special Training To Qualify as Skilled Workers in Defense Industry May Get It Free; Here's the Dope

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In your column of Sunday, November 14, you discussed the problem of a man, 46, who asked how to overcome lifelong neuretic fears,—occasioned by a bitterly impoverished childhood. After pointing out that he has already attained a good understanding of the whys and wherefores of his condition, you told him: "There is nothing wrong with you, now, that action won't cure. And, indeed, positive action along lines of adult normalcy is the ONLY cure for your frustration-born heebie-jeebies."

You said productive work is one of the greatest media of soul-satisfaction known to mankind, as well as one of the greatest single aids to psychological stability that society can offer the individual,—and emphatically advised him to get a job; preferably one where he will work with his hands; and preferably in a defense industry, where he would get quick intensive training in highly specialized manual skills. In conclusion, you suggested that he "tie up with one of Henry J. Kaiser's organizations," and commended Mr. Kaiser as "a genius in the field of human relations."

By way of supplementing your prescription, I am enclosing herewith a schedule of the War Production Training Program courses which are sponsored by the United States Office of Education; and which are being offered through the public schools of the District of Columbia. These courses offer training for industries approved by the War Manpower Commission as essential to national defense. It is possible this list might provide your correspondent the specific guidance he needs. These courses are free and trainees may enroll at any time. Also, part-time instruction may be arranged with the School Principals, should the trainee be unable to attend full-time.

Kaiser Pays Trainees For Preliminary Study

I might state that we are at present offering a special training program for the Kaiser Ship Yards. Trainees receive 48 hours of basic training here, and receive additional training on the job. They are paid for this 48-hour training period received under the War Production Training Program, after they have completed three months of service with the Kaiser Company. Full details of this particular training service may be secured from the training centers; or from the District of Columbia Employment Service. Yours very truly,

HAROLD A. CLARK,
Head of Department.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The mimeographed schedule inclosed with the foregoing letter lists Mr. William A. Thompson, telephone EXecutive 7482, as the source of information about classes for white trainees; and Mr. C. V. Smith, telephone NAtional 6000, extension 2548, for information about classes for colored trainees. The telephone number of the D. C. Employment Service is NAtional 6000.)

Young Wife Talks Of Kissing Games

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In last Friday's column, you published a letter from a woman who is greatly distressed because her daughter, 17,—who has no steady beau, but goes out with many different boys,—is very free with her hugs and kisses, and seems to expect and like that sort of thing. The mother also reported that her daughter recently gave a party for young people, and the youngsters spent the whole evening playing kissing games,—which, to the mother, "looked very cheap." She asked how to deal with the girl, who considers her ideas of propriety very old-fashioned, and not up-to-date with the younger generation.

I AM A YOUNG married woman, and it is not long ago that I was a flighty teen-age girl myself. I can still remember all the "problems" of youth, and at the same time see them from a parent's viewpoint, too. This is my opinion of her daughter's problem: At the age of 17 and 18, boys and girls certainly should have outgrown "kissing games"; but when they haven't, they need some parental guidance. The best way to get that guidance is through party-giving at home. And the best kind of young people's party is the "party with a purpose,"—which can be a great success without kissing games.

Well-Planned Party Is Much More Fun

MOST OF THE leading women's magazines publish pamphlets telling how to organize such parties,—as, for instance, skating parties, treasure hunts, charades and guessing games, ping-pong and darts (if you have a playroom), etc. The suggestions are as various as the different kinds of homes people live in; and the pamphlets help you plan the sort of party you are in a position to give. This worried mother mentioned "passing a tray of food every once in a while,"—in a fruitless effort to break up the kissing games. A better plan, I think, is to let the youngsters help themselves,—even to fixing some of the food. Turn them loose in the kitchen and let them pop corn or make candy; or carve their own sandwiches, or scramble eggs and make toast and hot chocolate. This is practically a sure-fire way of keeping them busy and interested.

I STILL remember the agonies I went through when I had parties. We played kissing games, too,—though at an earlier age,—and my parents were always hovering around, and we thought it cramped our style. Other parents left us completely alone,—which wasn't right, either. There should have been a happy medium;—some supervision, but not too much. In giving advice, a mother should talk with her daughter as one grown-up to another;—not with a censorious attitude, but with serious interest in the problem under discussion. If she brings this approach to the kissing problem, for instance,—which is a crucial problem to the adolescent girl,—she will probably learn that her daughter kisses boys because she thinks (1) they expect it and (2) her popularity depends on it. An excellent follow-up to that discovery is to give her a good book on sex education.

Don't Be Negative, She Tells Parents

I HOPE W. P. S. will try my suggestions. If she refuses to let her daughter have parties, the crowd will go elsewhere. If she forbids drinking beer in her home, they will get it at beer parlors. And there is no way to keep her from kissing boys except by helping her understand why promiscuous kissing is harmful. Sincerely, E. R. G.

Barbecued Star Ham—It's Extra Zesty!

A good cook gets extra zest into every meal. And that's why Barbecued Ham and Cabbage is a good cook's favorite! For a tangy sauce points up the fine flavor of hickory smoked ham.

Ask for the shank or butt half of a Star Ham weighing about 5-6 pounds. (Ample for a big dinner and three or four leftover dishes, too.) We recommend Armour's Star Ham because it's mellowed in fragrant hickory smoke is deliciously tender.

Wrap ham in waxed paper and set on rack in open roasting pan. Roast in 325° F. oven 25 minutes to the pound. Remove paper and rind, score fat in squares and brush with this barbecue sauce:

Mix and heat together 2 tbsps. butter, 1 chopped onion, ½ tsp. pepper, 3 tbsps. sugar, 2 tsps. dry mustard, 3 tbsps. Worcestershire Sauce, 2 tsps. Tabasco sauce, 1 cup catsup, ¼ cup vinegar and ¼ cup water.

Return ham to oven to glaze. Add second coat of sauce 15 minutes later. Serve with extra barbecue sauce and wedges of cooked fresh cabbage.

Army Finds Many Youths Are Defective

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

Here is some official information on the causes of rejection in the Army among applicants 18 and 19 years old.

The gross figures show that 23 per cent of white youths were rejected for physical defects, and that 45 per cent of Negroes were rejected. This seems surprisingly high in both groups.

The chief cause of rejection among the Negroes was defective education.

The chief cause of rejection among the white applicants was eye defects and the second mental disease. This has nothing to do with mental deficiency which comes in a different category. The applicants rejected for mental disease were actually insane.

Hernia, the subject that is heard about so much, is sixth in the list among both whites and Negroes.

Ear trouble, heart disease and underweight stand pretty high.

Breaking these figures down, the eye trouble was blindness in 44 out of a thousand applicants. Defective vision in 24 out of a thousand.

Deafness was comparatively rare, but running ears occurred in 10 out of 1000 cases.

The layman sometimes finds it difficult to understand why an applicant is rejected on account of his teeth. Having a denture will reject you. So will a sufficient number of missing teeth.

This was explained to me by a submarine officer. When the men escape from a submerged submarine they hold a rubber respirator in their mouths which gives them oxygen until they reach the surface. Without good teeth they couldn't do it.

No matter how much bragging we have had on the Army food, the men have to be equipped to eat anything, any time.

Heart disease ranks fairly high, but the boards are very strict on heart disease. Foot trouble does not show a very high percentage. I presume most develop foot trouble after they get in the Army.

It is somewhat strange to find more farmers rejected than any other kind of worker. We had always thought of the rugged farmer as the prime example of good health. Not at all. White collar men are healthier than the farmers.

The record as a whole is certainly not anything to be proud of. It is true the medical examiners have been more strict in this war than the last. But even so in a young age group to find 23 per cent of white applicants so physically disabled they can't even march, and 45 per cent of Negroes does not speak well for the Nation.

THE CLUB JALNA OPENING, awaited for weeks, will take place next Wednesday—but definitely this time. Fausto Curbelos' band, formerly of the Stork Club, and Bernice Park from Manhattan's Copocabana, will be the chief diversion luminaries . . . Unleashed exoticism dominates the Jalna decorations. There's a claret-colored background draped with several thousand yards of shocking pink satins, doodads in white baroque and copper mirrors.

GAY AS A LARK is li'l Patsy Garrett and so was her El Patio opening. Rocco Terrone of Treasure Island had a dinner party and we wouldn't be surprised if Patsy repays the call by dropping in for Rocco's afternoon broadcast at T. I. Also ringsiding was Nan Blackstone from Olmsted's, and her good-looking husband, Ronnie Gerard. El Patio's owner, Johnny Longo, and Adrian Rollini, released from his bandstand duties, were relaxing before catching the choo-choo to Florida. Ruth Petty, of the blonde bangs, was having a night off from Paul Young's and joined the party-ing . . . Both Patsy and the new Myles Hallet Band gave a swell account of themselves . . . All hands wound up at Olmsted's for the late show.

Restaurant "400" will be open on Sundays hereafter. There'll be the usual big crew of entertainers appearing both afternoon and evening, and Chef Sangeorge promises something special in Sunday menus.

Family Housing Demand Tops That for Single

By Adele Bernstein

Evidence that the previously dominant "single worker" population of Washington is steadily giving way to increasing numbers of families is indicated in the type of housing demands made in the last month at the War Housing Center.

Figures released this week by Director Marvin Wire show that the demand for rooms, usually in proportion to the number of single persons in an area, has so far dropped that more than 5000 such vacancies are now listed with the War Housing Center. As a result, the city-wide appeal to home owners to rent their unoccupied rooms to war workers has been abandoned.

Applications for family accommodations, on the other hand, have shown a steady increase. In June of this past summer, 2210 requests for family housing were made at the center; in July, 2940 were made, and in August the number was 3936.

Requests Increase

The most recent available figure, for the month ending October 20, shows that such requests have jumped to 4327.

At the same time, Wire pointed out, despite recent publicity on the large amount of housing standing vacant here, there are actually very few available family accomodations in the entire metropolitan area."

This is true, he said, even though the National Housing Agency a few weeks ago stated that more than 2000 apartments for white occupancy are vacant in publicly financed housing projects in Washington.

What is generally overlooked in estimates of the situation, he declared, is that a large proportion of such vacancies are not available to the general public, that they are "reserved" for incoming families of essential workers in specified Government agencies and war industries.

For example, there are, as of this current month, over 1000 vacant family apartments in low-cost housing projects built by the National Capital Housing Authority. A partial breakdown of the "reservations," however, reveals how little is actually left for the ordinary public.

Held in Reserve

Of 238 units in NCHA's Fairway Homes, at least 100 are reserved for newly arrived civilian and military employes of the Medical Center at Walter Reed Hospital. In the Calvert Housing Project, out of 500 units, more than 200 are being held for employes of the Engineering & Research Corp. at Riverdale, Md. And the entire 315 apartments in the Carrie Houses, also built by NCHA, are reserved for Camp Springs workers and employes at the Naval Hydrographic Station in Suitland, Md.

Almost two-thirds of the Lily Ponds homes will be occupied by military and civian personnel of the Washington Navy Yard, the Naval Air Station and Research Laboratories and by Bellevue Powder Factory workers.

The fact that a large amount of housing, both public and private, came on the market all at once in the past three months because building conditions were favorable, leads to an erroneous conclusion that vacancies in Washington will henceforth exceed the demand, it was said.

The inevitable lag between the time a vacancy occurs and the family moves itself and its belongings from a far-distant city, however, must be considered, Wire said. And the likelihood is that all present housing, barring furnished rooms, soon will be completely filled.

Sheriffs Lauded For Suppressing Marihuana Traffic

County sheriffs in the areas where there was grown 150,000 acres of the hemp from which marihuana is obtained were praised yesterday for their part in keeping the drug from reaching the markets by Harry Anslinger, United States Commissioner of Narcotics, speaking at the National Sheriffs Association convention.

The sessions are being held at the Willard Hotel.

Miss Alice Nutt, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, discussed the work of that bureau and suggested that institutions appearing less like jails should be used to house juvenile delinquents.

Others on the program were James V. Bennett, director of the Bureau of Prisons, Department of Justice; Warden Paul R. Brown, Westchester, N. Y., county prison, and Dr. Otis Anderson, United States Public Health Service.

Judge Wright, Noted Jurist, Dies at 79

Former Judge Daniel Thew Wright, 79, justice of the District Supreme Court from 1903 to 1914 and prominent Washington lawyer until his retirement six years ago, died yesterday at his country home near Fenwick, Md. He had been ill for more than six months.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Alice Wright Fleming, 2200 Wyoming ave. nw., with the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Church, officiating. Burial in Rock Creek Cemetery will be private.

Judge Wright was born in Riverside, Ohio, September 24, 1864, the son of Daniel Thew Wright, a judge of the State supreme court, and Juliet Frances Wright.

A graduate of the University of Cincinnati at the age of 18, he was admitted to the bar in May, 1885. After serving as assistant prosecuting attorney of Hamilton County, he was in 1891 the youngest judge elected to the bench of the county's court of common pleas.

In 1903, Judge Wright was called to Washington by President Theodore Roosevelt to serve as associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District, which post he held until his resignation in 1914. During his term in this office, he taught law at Georgetown University.

Among the famous cases in which he figured during his many years of private practice was the defense of Harry F. Sinclair in the second "Teapot Dome" trial.

Survivors are his wife, the former Miss Lou Price Hinton of Athens, Ga.; two daughters, Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. Clara Wright Kite, and a son, Daniel Thew Wright 3d.

Maj. Albert C. Baty

The War Department announced yesterday the death at Fort Myer of Maj. Albert C. Baty, 55, commanding officer of the Army School of Music there and ceremonial officer for the Military District of Washington.

Major Baty was a native of Union City, Tenn., where he entered the Army in 1910. He served in the Mexican campaign under Gen. John J. Pershing and was with the Seventh Division in France during the first World War. Besides his duties at Fort Myer, Major Baty was the protocol officer for all Washington military functions including those held at the White House and Arlington Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife and a son, Thomas Baty, who reside at 1322 Queen st. nw.

Clyde E. Rodgers Killed in Action On Naval Air Duty

Clyde Eugene Rodgers of Washington, aviation machinist's mate, first class, has been killed in action, the Navy Department reported yesterday in listing 49 additional casualties.

The list included 21 dead, 11 wounded and 17 missing, bringing total Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties since Pearl Harbor to 31,546.

Mr. Rodgers, who had been a member of the U. S. Naval Reserve for about six years, was called to active duty in May, 1941, and saw service in Puerto Rico, Iceland and Bermuda. He was assigned to a bombing detachment on a B-24 Liberator.

Born in Warm Springs, Va., August 27, 1919, he came here about 10 years ago with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Rodgers, of 415 10th st. ne. After graduation at Tech High School, he was employed at the Ace Auto Glass Co.

In addition to his parents, survivors include his wife, Mrs. Ethel Mae Rodgers, of 3913 Burns pl. se., and a brother, Lanier Rodgers, a Navy Yard employe.

Two Men Booked For Grand Jury In Liquor Theft

Two Negroes were held for the action of the grand jury at Municipal Court yesterday after being "caught in the act" of pilfering 14 cases of whisky valuey at $385 from the Try-Me Bottling Plant, 1300 block Florida ave. ne.

Detectives were "planted" in the company building when the two men, identified as Hugh Lee Hill, 22, 39 Fenton pl. nw., and George Brooks, 24, 6111 Jay st. ne., drove up to a rear door and began loading the cases into a car.

Meanwhile, two more reports of liquor thefts were made to police. James Brunzos, owner of the Miami Grill at 3642 Georgia ave. nw., reported that spirits valued at $225 were stolen from the restaurant early yesterday and Sam Delisi, proprietor of the Atlas Liquor Store at 1031 North Capitol st., said $285 in cash and whisky valued at $267 were stolen Wednesday.

Police Department Commended by Area Commander

A letter of commendation was received yesterday by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, from Maj. Gen. John T. Lewis, commanding general of the Military District of Washington, who accompanied Major Kelly and Commissioner J. Russell Young on their recent tour of inspection of the police department.

Major General Lewis said in the letter that he was particularly impressed with the high degree of efficiency and the high standard of training he found in the police department. He also expressed gratification for the cooperation given to the military police and added: "You have made available to us many facilities which assist the military police in carrying out their duties more efficiently."

Kiwanis Club Votes to Aid Children Here

Members of the Kiwanis Club at their luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower elected officers for the year; voted to establish a foundation for the care of underprivileged children and decided to accept the invitation of the Rotarians to be their guests at the Willard for a Thanksgiving dinner at 12:30 p. m.

GILL

Officers elected are:

W. Herbert Gill, president, succeeding Raymond F. Garrity, and John G. Scharf, first vice president. There was no contest for either. William F. Nelson, second vice president, defeated Maurice R. Palmer. Each had nominated the other.

The board of directors consists of Palmer, whose defeat for second vice president automatically made him a candidate for the lesser office; C. Ralph Barker, Joseph H. Galliher, Theodore C. Hudson, jr., John W. Rustin, Orville U. Singer, William F. Smith, Robert P. Tiffey and Ford E. Young.

The foundation will be established as soon as necessary legal steps can be taken, and it was announced contributions would be received from both members and nonmembers. The first to take advantage of that provision was Ralph Camdis, who contributed $5. His home is in Brooklyn, where he is a member.

The amount of money in the fund was not disclosed.

Lawyers to Honor Fly

James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC and the Board of War Communications, will be honored for his continual fight for free speech, at a dinner to be given today at 7 p.m. by the D. C. Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild in the Mayflower Hotel.

OFFICIAL NOTICES 5

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, November 17, 1943. Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of an item authorizing changes in the permanent system of highways contained in D. C. Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914 (Public Act No. 435, 63nd Congress), approved March 4, 1913, as amended by an Act approved April 30, 1926 (Public Act No. 38, 69th Congress), the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the Board Room in the District Building, 14th and E Streets, Northwest, Washington, D. C., on MONDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1943, at 10 o'clock A. M., to interested property owners in the matter of a proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways affecting property in the Southeast Section of the District of Columbia located within the area bounded on the north by Alabama Avenue and Jasper Street, on the southeast by the District of Columbia-Maryland Boundary Line, and on the west by Camp Simms, revising the proposed street system by eliminating proposed streets and providing new proposed streets within the above described territory. A plat showing the proposed changes, numbered as Surveyor's Office Map 2929, is on file in the office of the Surveyor, D. C., Room 408 District Building, 14th and E Streets, N.W., Washington, D. C., and may be examined by interested parties during business hours prior to the hearing. Said map will also be displayed at the hearing and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the proposed changes as shown on above-mentioned map. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, C. W. KUTZ, GUY MASON, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

DONALD DUCK — By Walt Disney

WHAT'S THE SMARTEST ANIMAL? DOGS, BOYS, BEYOND A DOUBT!
GEE, ARE DOGS SMARTER THAN CATS, UNCA DONALD?
OF COURSE! CAT'S ARE THE DUMBEST THINGS ALIVE!
GEE, ARE THEY EVEN DUMBER THAN FISH?
LISTEN, BOYS, YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE ME IF I TOLD YOU HOW—FAR CATS COME AFTER FISH!

YA KNOW—I MIGHT AS WELL GET A BOTTLE—JIST IN CASE I EVER MEET TH' GAL A MY DREAMS.
OH C'MON. I'VE GOTTA SEE SOME SIGHTS.
PARFUM
WELL FER THE LUVVA MUD—JOE!
HULLO, ROY. GOLLY IT'S GOOD T'SEE YOU. THIS IS HERE'S MY PAL, JERRY LEEMY.
ANY FRIEND A JOE'S A FRIEND A MINE—EVEN A SAILOR.
WHAT'SA MATTER, PAL—WHERE JA GET IT? ITALY? JA GET A PURPLE HEART?
NO-O-O JIST A LITTLE SCRATCH. BE AWRIGHT IN NO TIME.
BET WE'VE SEEN MORE ACTION THAN ANYBUDDY YOU KNOW, SAILOR.
I'M GOIN' OUT ON A PARTY. SOME BIG SHOTS HOUSE. HOW ABOUT COMIN' ALONG?
NO THANKS, ROY. WE WANTA LOOK AT TH' SIGHTS—AN' WE HAFTA REPORT AT FIVE.
AH!!—LET'S GO ON TH' PARTY.

JANE ARDEN — No Time Wasted — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

JUST OUT OF CURIOSITY STUN LOOKED UP THE WIDOW WHO NEEDED HELP—AND RAN INTO JANE MINDING THE CHILDREN
DEFINITELY—I USED TO LIKE YOU—
SO I USED TO BE KIND AND HAPPY—AND NOW I'VE CHANGED FOR THE WORSE? HAVE I?
BAH! DO I HAVE TO BUY PEOPLE'S GOOD OPINION WITH MY MONEY?
NO—YOU NEVER USED TO WORRY ABOUT PUBLIC OPINION—YOU DIDN'T HAVE TO—
THIS PRATTLE ISN'T GETTING US ANYWHERE—WHAT ARE YOU WASTING YOUR TIME HERE FOR?
THERE'S NO TIME WASTED HERE—I'M LOOKING AFTER THE CHILDREN WHILE THEIR MOTHER WORKS—LATER WE'LL WORK OUT SOMETHING—

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

EARLY MORNING IN THE COZY BACHELOR-GIRL APARTMENT OF LOIS LANE ---
THAT CAN'T BE THE ALARM CLOCK AT THIS HOUR! GOOD HEAVENS, IT'S THE DOORBELL!
RA-RING!
ALL RIGHT, ALL RIGHT!
RRING!
SUSIE! BUT YOU LIVE A THOUSAND MILES FROM HERE!
NO MORE, AUNTY LOIS! MAMA TOLD ME SHE DIDN'T LIKE ME ANY MORE AND SHE PUT ME OUT AND I DIDN'T HAVE ANY MONEY AND I WALKED ALL THE WAY HERE AND HERE I AM AND AREN'T YOU HAPPY?
SUSIE! HOW CAN YOU SAY SUCH THINGS—SUCH TERRIBLE FIBS!
I AM A PRETTY TERRIFIC FIBBER, AIN'T I, AUNTY, LOIS
--AND THAT'S NO FIB, SUSIE! BUT THAT TALENT OF YOURS IS GOING TO CAUSE A LOT OF PEOPLE A LOT OF TROUBLE!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Vultures Are Always Patient — By Milton Caniff

BONNY AND LEE, THIS IS MACK IN THE TRANSPORT... HOW'S THE RIDE?
OKAY, CAPTAIN MACK!
THINK YOU GUYS CAN FIND YOUR WAY HOME FROM HERE?
SURE, WE'VE CHECKED LANDMARKS, MACK.
GOOD! TERRY, GRETT MURMUR SAYS SO LONG! SHE'D TALK TO YOU, HERSELF, BUT SHE'S CUDDLED UP ON MY LAP WITH HER HEAD ON MY SHOULDER—AND I DON'T WANT TO DISTURB HER...YOU KNOW HOW IT IS!
THE FIGHTER ESCORT OF THE TRANSPORT CARRYING THE CHINESE OFFICIALS WILL TURN BACK WHEN THEIR FUEL IS HALF GONE! WE WILL STAY IN THE SUN AND ATTACK AT THAT TIME!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

GYPSY, IF YOU DON'T WANT TO ATTRACT ATTENTION, HERE IN ELM CITY, SHOULDN'T YOU WEAR SOMETHING A LITTLE LESS··· EXTREME?
THAT'S AN ANGLE, MRS. WORTH! BUT···WELL···I DIDN'T HAVE TIME TO PACK··· WHEN I LEFT NEW YORK!
PERHAPS YOU COULD BUY SOME SIMPLE LITTLE DRESSES HERE?
OH, I GOT THE DOUGH! BUT I HATE TO GO OUT ··AN' GET THE DOUBLE-O FROM ALL OUR NOSEY NEIGHBORS!
YOU'LL HAVE TO GO OUT SOONER OR LATER, MY CHILD!
YEAH!···SOONER OR LATER!···OKAY!·· IT MIGHT JUST AS WELL BE SOONER···!

MICKEY FINN — The "Come-On" — By Lank Leonard

WHY DON'T YOU THINK I SHOULD BE WORKING HERE, PHIL?
THE WORK IS TOO HARD, OWNEY! YOU'RE NOT A YOUNG MAN ANY MORE AND—PHIL—TWO BUCKS ON "SNAKE EYES" IN THE THIRD!
WHAT ARE YOU DOING, PHIL—MAKIN' BOOK ON THE HORSES—ON THE SIDE?
OH-AH-ONCE IN A WHILE I-AH—TAKE A SMALL WAGER—JUST TO BE SOCIABLE!
WELL, I LIKE TO BE SOCIABLE, TOO—LET ME SEE THAT PAPER—I MIGHT MAKE A BET WITH YOU, MYSELF!
HERE'S THE FIVE, PHIL! I THOUGHT THAT NAG I PICKED WAS A SURE THING!
WELL, DON'T BE DISCOURAGED, OWNEY! MAYBE YOU'LL HAVE BETTER LUCK TOMORROW!

MR. AND MRS. — Something for His Personality — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

WHY THIS SUDDEN BURST OF INDUSTRY?
I'M JUST SHINING MY SHOES
YOU HAVEN'T USED THAT OLD BLACKING BOX IN YEARS
THEN IT WAS ABOUT TIME I DID
IF YOU'RE DOING IT TO SAVE MONEY IT'S A GOOD IDEA
NOT THAT. IT'S MY PERSONALITY I'VE GOT TO THINK OF WHY, JOE GREEN, YOU MUST BE CRAZY! YOU'RE MIXING BOTH BROWN AND BLACK PASTE!
YEP. A MAN CAN'T USE A LIPSTICK OR AN EYEBROW PENCIL. A SHOEBRUSH IS ALL HE HAS TO GET JUST THE RIGHT TINT

DIXIE DUGAN — Slowly — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

SLOWLY
AFTER ALL I JUST BET ART TODAY—IN THE NEXT WEEK OR SO—WITH YOU OUT OF THE PICTURE—MEBBE HE'LL TAKE NOTICE OF ME
I REALLY HOPE SO, MICKEY-
I JUST CAN'T TELL THE BOY I DON'T WANT TO MARRY HIM—THAT I ONLY PROMISED TO BECAUSE I DIDN'T THINK HE'D GET WELL!
I KNOW—BUT IF YOU HAVE TO!—HE MIGHT NOT TAKE ANY INTEREST IN ME WHATSOEVER
MICKEY—YOU'RE WANTED ON THE PHONE!—A BOY NAMED ART SLOW EH?
HONEST—REALLY—I-I DON'T KNOW WHY HE SHOULD CALL

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Danger Approaches — By Frank Martinek

GRETA, I WILL REWARD YOU FOR THIS!!
YES..YES.. I MUST GET AWAY FROM IT ALL!!
I'LL TAKE THESE KEYS.... OPEN THE AIR VENTS..REVIVE WINSLOW, AND HELP HIM ESCAPE!
MEANWHILE, GOHITRO ET AL ARE ASSEMBLING THE AIRLIFT TO MAKE THEIR GETAWAY WHO FIRED THAT SHOT? RIMMEL, GO SEE WHAT IT IS!

WINNIE WINKLE — The Stew Thickens — By Branner

IF YOU WERE RIGHT OUTSIDE THE KITCHEN DOOR WHEN HE AND MOTHER HAD COFFEE, WHY DIDN'T YOU GO IN AND CONFRONT THEM?
'CAUSE I GOT A SWELL IDEA ---
I READ A STORY, WHERE A FELLER WHO WAS JILTED BY HIS GAL, GOT HIMSELF ANOTHER GAL TO MAKE TH' FIRST GAL JEALOUS!!
BUT YOU CAN'T DO A THING LIKE THAT--
OH, NO?!! I COULD LET THAT MAN-CHASING WIDOW, MRS. HELEN SLUMMER, CATCH UP WITH ME!!
FATHER!
